MIGHTY WARSHIP PAGEANT

PORTSMOUTH, England, June 24.—The battleship Delaware, the mighty dreadnaught of the United States Navy, was the greatest of all to-day in the coronation naval review, the most wonderful sea pageant of modern times.

Two hundred vessels of war, the pride of all nations, passed before King George and Queen Mary. One hundred and seventy-three of these were His Majesty's own ships. The dreadnaughts of Germany, France, Italy, Russia and Japan joined in the international tribute, passing before the imperial rulers and the ambassadors of every land, but the Delaware was mightiest of all, both in displacement and armament.

The ovation given the great gray American warship as she passed majestically along was equal to that accorded the Victory, Nelson's historic flagship, which led the imposing line. A vast and brilliant throng was wildly enthusiastic over the spectacle, which surpassed, from every standpoint, the similar pageant that marked the opening of Edward's reign.

Guns of Sixteen Nations.

Great guns of the ships of sixteen nations thundered forth the royal salute as King George and Queen Mary stepped off the special train that had brought them and a brilliant suite, including foreign envoys, colonial ministers, princes and noblemen, from London.

The royal party immediately embarked on the yacht Albert and Victoria, which was drawn up alongside the jetty on which the special train was run, and as soon as the yacht had steamed into position the naval review was begun.

The King and Queen arrived at 12:25 o'clock. They were met by Admiral Sir Arthur Moore, K. C. B., in charge of the British fleet, and commander-in-chief of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, and other officers who formed a guard of honor.

Prominent in the royal party was John Hays Hammond, special envoy from the United States to the coronation.

The royal couple immediately boarded the Albert and Victoria. As the royal standard fluttered from the peak the guns of the old ship of war Victory, the flagship of Admiral Nelson, led in the royal salute.

The naval review established a new record for martial pageantry in British waters, 173 British warships being in line. The armada was the most brilliant sight ever seen off the Spithead naval station.

For Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee only 165 ships of all classes were as-

MISS TINA HITCHCOCK WINS RACE

Society Girls Free-for-All Polo Pony Race; Country Club track; three furlongs. To be ridden astride and in riding breeches. Weather clear; track, fast; start, good. Off at 11:42. Time, 44 seconds. Starter and judge—Henry Warren of Philadelphia.

Entries and odds.

Tina Hitchcock, 24, first by 5 lengths.
Emily Ranreph, 3-1, second by a neck.
Mrs. Emily Lindsay, 10-1, third by 2 lengths.

Mrs. Thomas J. Hitchcock, Jr., 8-1, fourth by 4 length.

Eleonora Sears, 3-1, also ran.

Eleonora Sears also ran in the exciting race for women riders astride and in riding breeches that was a long-awaited feature of the closing day of the Country Club meet at Clyde Park, Brookline. Miss Tina Hitchcock of Hempstead, L. I., won handily in 44 seconds for the three furlongs.

At the last moment several of the society girls who were to have competed as the result of a bet that was made at an earlier session of the meet withdrew, but when the field lined up at the barrier there were five starters, one of them, however, had refused to don riding breeches. She was permitted to ride the race sidesaddle and in a regulation habit.

A considerable number of members of the Country Club had motored to Clyde Park early so as not to miss the really big event of the day. The time of the start had been kept a strict secret and it was not until Miss Randolph of Philadelphia cantered out on the track that the expectant society folk and the crowd of stableboys and stray spectators knew that the race was on.

Wore a Sleeveless Coat.

Miss Randolph's costume was composed of a riding coat that came to the knees and just revealed a part of her checked breeches. The coat was sleeveless and gave her arms free play. She wore also high riding boots and a jockey cap of black.

Miss Hitchcock was only a minute behind. She wore black breeches and a black coat, riding boots and a cork helmet that nearly confined her masses of blonde hair. She was the favorite in the quiet betting that immediately began until Miss Randolph went over the track at a fast clip in several tryouts. Then the odds on Miss Hitchcock went down.

Mrs. Hitchcock and Mrs. Lindsay of Lakewood appeared almost simultaneously and there was a murmur as it was seen that Mrs. Lindsay was in a reclining woman's habit and was using a sidesaddle. Mrs. Hitchcock wore gray checked riding breeches and a light-fitting black coat, with a brown soft hat.

Then on rather a sorry-looking pony appeared Miss Sears, a golf cap pulled down over her eyes. She had donned a pair of checked breeches.

Henry Warren of Philadelphia was the starter. At 11:40 he gave the word, and four of the horses sprang away, but Miss Sears's mount was left at the post, and Miss Hitchcock had stolen such a lead that Starter Warren called them all back.

BOSTON ENGINEER TO WED IN BIDDEFORD

Mr. Leahy is a civil engineer and is superintendent for a large Boston contracting firm. Miss Maguire is one of the most popular young women in Biddeford, where she is prominent in Catholic circles.

LITTLE GIRL AND PET POODLE WHO FLED FEVER HOME

CATHARINE GRIFFIN AND HER FRENCH TOY POODLE

HUNT IS ON FOR GERM POODLE

If you find a white fluffy little French poodle of the toy dog variety don't get too friendly with him.

Poodle has germs in his wool. He is a traveling scarlet fever canine. He has no scarlet fever himself, so far as known. But he is lugging around germs enough in his foliage to infect no end of human beings.

So, if you run across this fluffy poodle pup, don't pick him up and hug him. Rather tie a string to his collar and lead him gently but swiftly to the Board of Health. The board won't harm the poodle. But it will spray his pelt with germicide.

There is a pathetic strain running through the story, too, for the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Griffin of No. 28 Binney street, Roxbury, are desolate over the disappearance of Poodle.

It was bad enough when Catherine, Eileen and Patricia Blaney went down with scarlet fever. But it was mighty tough, the kids thought, when poodle strayed away from home.

Then Catherine told the family doctor, "Great Scott," said the medical man, "that dog's full of scarlet fever germs. He must be caught and looked up. He must be fumigated."

"Oh!" wailed four-year-old Eileen, "I don't wanna have him fumigated, Doctor."

Doctor assured Eileen and the other kids that fumigation wouldn't hurt poodle. It would only kill the nasty germs.

But the kids were inconsolable. They don't want poodle fumigated. They want him back home. Poodle disappeared Monday. Mr. Griffin has advertised for the pup.

In the interest of the children and public safety it is hoped poodle will be found. But remember, if you find him, don't try to be a pest-friend. Just be reasonable about it. Hustle him to the Board of Health and give the bacteriologists a whack at the germs first.

LIGHTNING BALL KICKED BY GIRL

NEW YORK, June 24.—Fourteen-year-old Louise Hoelzer, daughter of Rev. J. M. Hoelzer, pastor of the Christ Evangelical Church in Paterson, N. J., is being looked upon as a marvel by her friends. She kicked a "ball of lightning" and is still alive. Miss Louise was in the parsonage when the severe electrical storm struck the city. While her father was in his study, she, with Lydia, aged twelve, and Edward, aged two, was at play in the kitchen. There was a ringing of sleighs following a severe flash of lightning, and the children were terrified when a ball of fire appeared in the recess of the chimney in which the range stands.

"I was frightened at first," said the elder girl in telling her story to-day, "but when I saw that ball of fire sailing in front of the stove I was afraid it was going to eat into the floor and set fire to our home. It looked round and rolled quite still. I rushed up to it and struck out with my foot. To my surprise, it separated into many pieces. I had expected to find it heavy, but, instead, it was light."

RED SOX GO AFTER 3RD GAME

BATTING ORDER.

BOSTON.	ATHLETICS.
Hooper, r.f.	Lord, l.f.
Gardner, 2b.	Strunck, c.f.
Speaker, c.f.	Collins, 2b.
Lewis, l.f.	Baker, 3b.
Yerkes, 3b.	McInnis, 1b.
Wagner, s.s.	Murphy, r.f.
Engle, 1b.	Barry, s.s.
Nunamaker, c.	Thomas, c.
Collins, p.	Bender, p.

The Red Sox are on again for another battle with the Athletics at the Huntington Avenue Grounds this afternoon. And it will be some battle. If anyone believes the Athletics are going to start on the downward path without a strenuous struggle they have another think, and if the Red Sox are going to give another dose like the double one they administered yesterday it will be only after they have played real pennant-winning baseball.

That the Speed Boys are there with the goods at times is unquestioned. The only question is "Will they be there with the goods this afternoon?" They'll do their best, and Jerry Donovan has spoken a lot of sound talk to his men in the hope of encouraging them on in the good work.

The game begins at 3:30 and a regular holiday crowd will be present. The two Wins of yesterday, the Athletics' reputation, the fair weather, and the day of the week will combine to draw the fans from the farthermost ends of Greater Boston to watch the contest.

Either Collins or Hall will be given an opportunity to make fame for themselves against the champion's batsmen. The Athletics will probably pitch Bender, but Manager Mack may change his mind and produce something else in the line of a spitball twirler in an endeavor to win the game.

Manager Tenney will probably use Wagner against the Phillies in Philadelphia this afternoon, and Moore will be pitching choice. Boob will deny the mark himself. The close and exciting game of yesterday has the Phillies fans excited and a big crowd will be out to see the game.

Williams and Red Sox Mascot

The Red Sox first baseman brought good luck to the Huntington Avenue Grounds yesterday when he appeared at the players' bench with a live little bird comfortably ensconced in his shirt bosom. The feathered mascot is still on the job and in the care of Player Williams.

JURY IN GRAFT CASE RELEASED

SALEM, June 24.—After being out twenty-six hours, the jury in the Lawrence graft case adjourned and was released this afternoon. It is believed that the jurors split in hopeless deadlock. None of the court officers would say whether the jury had reached a decision or not.

The defendants in the graft case are Patrick J. Lyons, superintendent of streets; Michael Flynn, clerk in the street department, both of Lawrence, and Frank Philbrick, contractor of Lowell, who are charged with conspiracy to defraud the city of Lawrence. The case of Fred L. Snow, who turned state's evidence, was nolle prossed by the district attorney.

TAFT'S OLD COLLEGE CHUM IN JAIL GETS WEDDING INVITATION

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—In a cell at the county jail in Oakland, Thomas P. Wickes has received a delayed invitation from his old college friend, President Taft, to attend the celebration of his silver wedding. It found Wickes whiling away the time with his cellmate at a game of cards. Back of the invitation lies the friendship of student days in 1878 in Yale, where Taft and Wickes were classmates in the law department. Wickes has had a varied career since he left Yale. For years he was a noted lawyer in New York. After a time he drifted West and practiced law in San Francisco. He was arrested at the instance of a restaurant man on the charge of passing a fictitious check for $15.

BIRD CHANGES RED SOX LUCK

"The Bird on Williams' hat" is on the job again to-day as mascot for the Red Sox.

The birdlet is touted by the Red Sorers as the grandest little union mascot that ever filled a jinx. Witness birdie's performance at the opening double-header with the Athletics.

"Peep," said birdie, and the Red Sox won the first game.

"Peep, peep!" twittered the feathered mascot, and the Athletics were walloped again.

Williams, one of the catchers and first-suckers in the Red Sox camp, is next friend to Birdie. Williams was cooing through the key from the dressing room when Birdie fell on Williams' cap in a vain effort to fly. Birdie had lost his forward control or something was wrong with his engine, or he had some other aviation trouble. Anyhow, he volplaned down and made a neat landing on Williams' skypiece and thence fluttered to the ground. The husky ball player picked the feathered morsel up gently, gave it a drink of water and soothed its frightened bird-mind.

"A mascot," said Williams, and a genuine, all-wool, 18 karat mascot of the mascottest kind the bird proved.

Birdie accompanied Williams out to this afternoon's game. The baseball reporters are trying to figure out how they can list Birdie in the box score.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR "SEE" MANCHESTER

MANCHESTER, N. H., June 24.—The visiting Knights Templar, Sutton Commandery, of New Bedford, were taken in seventy-seven flag decked autos by Trinity Commandery of Manchester on a thirty-mile sight-seeing ride about the city to-day. Later they were entertained by Banker Walter M. Parker at his country mansion.

150 TOTS GIVE MAYOR PETITION

One hundred and fifty children of East Boston invaded City Hall to-day and presented to Mayor Fitzgerald a petition signed by 1,200 children asking for a playground and bathing place in the Ward Two district.

The party was received by the Mayor, who said: "I will do what I can to fill your much needed want. At your age I played barefooted in the North End and all the recreation I got was what I could get in the street."

Miss Evelyn Hurley, aged eleven, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hurley of No. 20 Chelsea street, presented the petition in behalf of the seventy-five girls of the party. James A. Kennedy, aged fifteen, of No. 57 Marion street, in behalf of the boys.

"If the children play in the street they are driven off by the police," said young Kennedy, "where they can learn to swim. Their fathers can sit on hot days after a hard day's work."

Mayor Fitzgerald gave each boy and girl a souvenir post card showing his House and the City Hall.

The party was in charge of the Rev. T. P. McGlinn, curate of the Holy Redeemer Church; Brother Dunstan of the Clifton School; ex-Representative James E. Fitzgerald and Richard McDonald.

MOORS EXONERATED BY FINANCE BOARD

The Finance Commission reported to Mayor Fitzgerald that the charges made by ex-Councilman Frank A. Goodwin to the effect that the firm of J. R. Moors & Co. had apparently evaded payment of taxes was unfounded. The investigating body says there is nothing in the circumstances of the case which indicate that Francis J. Moors, Arthur W. Moors or John J. Moors, the tax commissioner of the assessors, failed to perform their full duty in the premises.

ATWOOD CIRCLES OVER LYNN

Lynn shoe factory girls going to work at 6:45 a. m. spied a flying machine coming down over the Narrow Gauge tracks towards Lynn. The aviator was Harry N. Atwood on his way on a day of exhibition flying at Nahant.

The factory girls waved their handkerchiefs. Atwood circled over Central square, shot to Nahant, landed on the Golf Club links, came up an hour later and circled over Lynn again. Many Lynners had the 9o'clock whistles blow for him.

Thousands of people saw the aviator. They climbed to factory roofs and housetops. The bird-man was cheered again and again, especially when he cut circles, made volplanes and performed other aviation endeavors. Then he flew back to Nahant.

On his next appearance over Lynn, just before 7 o'clock, Atwood dropped a message from his Burgess-Wright biplane. But the message could not be found. It may have landed on some roof.

Over Harbor to Nahant.

After circling over Central square to the huge interest of everyone who was out at that hour, he cut across the edge of the harbor and over to Nahant.

The grassy expanse of the Nahant Golf Club offered a splendid landing place. But before alighting Atwood swept around the sky for a few wide circles, skimming over Bass Point and the harbor. Then he executed some speedy volplanes and then dropped out of the clouds before Nahant folk knew what was on. It had been his first and Atwood had been flying for a hostile nation he could have dropped bombs enough from his air craft to have wrecked the town before being discovered.

After cutting up those aerial tricks Atwood came down on the golf links, landing easily as a sparrow on a twig. His landing place was in the rear of the residence of Judge J. T. Wilson of Nahant District court. The retired justice was at breakfast and Atwood landed his morning eggs and toast to come out on the piazza and gaze at his novel visitor. Edward E. Stroot, the rich Lynn contractor, who arranged to make a flight with Atwood was on the golf links to greet the aviator. A few other people were among the welcoming group.

Atwood stayed on the links about an hour, inspecting his machine and engine. Both were in fine trim. He rose at 8:05

POMERENE SURE OF RECIPROCITY

Senator Atlee Pomerene and Congressman Alfred G. Allen of Ohio, in Boston on the way to attend the big Democratic conference and festival at Rockcliffe Lake today, brought this message to Massachusetts and the rest of New England:

First, the reciprocity bill will go through unamended.

Second, the next Democratic nominee for President and vice president will be Governor Harmon of Ohio.

Third, your Congressman Billy Murray is a wonder.

The nine Buckeye visitors reached Boston early today and went to Young's to be refreshed. They did not get tuning when Colonel Richard Field, the major domo of the Mayor's office, appeared on the scene and gave them a welcome to our city. An AMERICAN reporter chatted with the visitors.

"What about reciprocity?" was asked.

"Well," replied Congressman Allen, "we've done our duty in the House. It's up to the Senate. Better ask Senator Pomerene about it."

"How about it, Senator?"

Pomerene Praises Taft.

"The reciprocity bill will go through the Senate unamended," was the young Senator's response. "President Taft cannot be given too much praise for what he has done for the country. A man who will fling the gauntlet down in the standpatters as he has done is a real man.

"Those against reciprocity are playing a peculiar game and are divided into two divisions—those who are shouting madly for amendment and those who are quietly agreeing to amendments, saying to the public that if the bill is amended they will vote against it."

To which class does Senator Lodge belong?

"I can't say," replied Senator Pomerene, adding: "It's bad business to come into a man's own country and talk about him behind his back."

"What about 1912?" the reporter asked.

"There's only one man," the two visitors replied in a duet.

"And that's—"

"Jud Harmon, of course," they replied—and they called the Governor of Ohio "Jud."

"He'll be nominated by the Democrats?"

"Yes and elected," both solid as though they had practised it together for days.

"Oh, those gentlemen are from Ohio," broke in Dick Field by explanation of the Harmon enthusiasm.

Enthusiastic for Harmon.

"So's Taft," replied the two men, just as though they were singing it.

"Would Harmon carry Ohio against Taft?"

"He would," replied Senator Pomerene. "And when the next Democratic national convention is held Ohio's vote will be one first big question, and it will be this: Who can carry New York, Ohio and Indiana? It will be answered right off the reel that Harmon can carry three of them. That's the first question and that'll settle it."

Then the Ohio delegation were conducted to City Hall, where they met Mayor Fitzgerald and were taken over to the town. Later they went to Canobie Lake.

GOVERNOR BALDWIN AGAINST PROHIBITION

NEW HAVEN, June 24—Governor Baldwin, replying to an editorial in a recent issue of the Voter, the official organ of the Prohibition party of Connecticut, to the effect that he, on the ground that the organization favored the prohibition of the liquor traffic, had refused to answer an address of welcome at its national session in Sentry Hall, Hartford, next July, said:

"I think that the pledge of total abstinence from intoxicating liquors is to-day the most now a safeguard of health and character, but I am not a believer in crowding total abstinence down everybody's throat. Prohibition, in my view, should be a matter of local option and while I am not accustomed to take anything myself I have always voted for local option believing it to be too large a city to be governed under a state of prohibition."

CLYDE SHIP OWNERS TO RESIST STRIKE

GLASGOW June 24—The shipping district of the Clyde will become the big battleground in the marine strike, according to to-day's developments. Ship owners of the Clyde district, acting in unison, have resolved not to grant the demands of the men, declaring that rather than give in they will tie up all of their ships. The transatlantic liners of the Anchor, Allan and Donaldson lines scheduled to sail from here to-day got off with full complements of men, the companies having signed the new wage scale.

Quincy citizens gathered last evening in the rooms of the Squantum Inn to protest against the refusal of the City Council to grant licenses to the Squantum and Lee's inns. ATWOOD FLIES HIGH OVER LYNN with Mr. Strout as passenger, circled around Nahant, over the home of Senator Lodge and the peninsula generally. Then he took a bee-line toward Lynn City Hall.

Brings Letter from Lodge.

Atwood and Strout alighted at Nahant golf links at 8:25, having been twenty minutes in the air. Before they came down Strout dropped on the links a letter which had been mailed to him by Senator Lodge at Washington and containing an enclosure addressed to Judge J. T. Wilson "in the air." The letter read:

I gladly avail myself of this opportunity of sending my first message by air. I hope that Mr. Stroud's arrival, I will find you in good health and I hope that he will arrive safely. I am coming home next week for the commencement exercises.

HENRY CABOT LODGE.

Strout also brought, by the air line, two letters from Mayor Connery of Lynn. One was to Charles D. Vary, chairman of Nahant Board of Selectmen, wishing good luck and success. The other letter was from Mayor Connery to Clarke Wilson in similar congratulatory strain.

After bringing Strout back to earth Atwood went up for a third flight, making a five-minute air trip over the golf links for the benefit of the late arrivals.

Fire Alarm Sounded.

Someone called up Mayor Connery, saying: "A flying machine is coming to City Hall."

"Sound the fire alarm," said the Mayor, "give him the third alarm."

This brought all Lynn to its feet. They knew there was no fire, for no first or second alarms were found. People found Atwood swooping in wide circles over City Hall. Then he subsided down to within 200 feet of the hall. The whirring of his powerful engine could be heard.

A big crowd gathered in Central square and about City Hall. Office holders who were at the hall at that time hustled for the hall roof. The stenographer girls waved their handkerchiefs at the aviator. From factory roofs and housetops a multiple greeting was sent upward.

Spectators could see that Atwood had a passenger aboard, but they could not tell at the time who that second man was. Later it became known that Strout was the extra rider.

After flying over Lynn for about five minutes and giving Strout a view he never had of that city before, Atwood darted over toward Point of Pines. Thence he flew over Revere Beach and finally back to Nahant.

BOSTON LUCKY IN ITS WEATHER

To-day's seasonable weather will hold over Sunday for Boston, according to the local forecast. "Continued fair" is the prognosis, giving prospect of a comfortable Sunday for pleasure seekers.

Boston held a middle ground to-day between extremes of heat and cold in other parts of the country.

Chicago is wilted in a heat wave. Three deaths have been caused by heat here. The police have fifty prostrations recorded, with many others not listed officially. The mercury is up in the nineties.

Duluth, Minn., on the other hand, is chilly at 46 degrees above zero. Duluth is 400 miles west of Chicago. Furnace fires have been lighted for the coldest June weather Duluth has known for years.

WIFE LONGS TO HEAR OF BANDIT

Mrs. Robert A. Saunders, wife of the man who was driven to highway robbery at West Thornton, Vt., because of the illness of his wife, who was in want, he asserted, longs to hear from her husband, who is a fugitive from justice.

The woman wept bitter tears to-day as she sat in the home of a friend in South Boston with her tiny, dark-haired daughter, two weeks old, in her lap.

"Have you heard from Robert?" was the first question of the distressed woman when a reporter from the AMERICAN entered the house.

"Nothing has been heard from him since he wrote his confession to the AMERICAN," she was told.

"Oh," she cried, "this suspense is unbearable. I would like to know where he is. I should like to hear from him.

"What am I and this little child to do? I never thought that my child would come into the world amid so much sorrow. I can hardly bear it."

Not Able to Work Now.

Offers of employment have come to Mrs. Saunders through the AMERICAN, but she is not able to work, and probably will not be for some weeks. The shock of her husband's trouble has impeded her recovery from her illness at the birth of her baby.

Mrs. Saunders, who came to this country a bright-hearted and merry girl of seven four years ago, finds herself alone with her baby and with few to help her. Her South Boston friends are loyal, but are not able to do much for her.

Yesterday there came a little bundle from Newport addressed to Mrs. Saunders. It contained a new suit of baby clothing. There was no name in the bundle, but when it was handed to the young mother she wept as though heart broken.

Besides this clothing and a baby cap, the following money has been contributed for the help of Mrs. Saunders:

Ada E. Staveley	$5.00
Y. O. Kalberg	1.00
E. Silverman	2.00
J. J. Connely, Webster	1.00
Mrs. Nathan Waxman	5.00

Deserving of Aid.

In the wide spread discussion that has resulted from the remarkable Saunders case all agree that no matter what the husband did the poor wife and her baby should not be made to suffer on his account, and that she is deserving of help. These letters have been received:

Editor AMERICAN:

I have read your story about Mrs. Saunders being in need of help because of the failure of her husband to do what was right. I read every word of that letter and I think that the poor man meant it all. He was the victim of circumstances. Most of us in our everyday life are prone to overlook the trials and tribulations that beset others, and we are apt to forget how hard it is for them to fight the battles of life. Poor Mr. Saunders, I sincerely believe, did this act as a last resort in his efforts to secure the wherewithal to care for his sick wife.

He has reached this conclusion after duly considering all the facts of the case I now feel that it is my duty to step forward and give what little I can to help this poor woman out of the trouble that has come to her. Accordingly, please find enclosed $1 which you will please add to the fund that is being collected for the worthy cause.

The law says that the wrong-doer shall be punished and so others may be deterred from also doing wrong. Let us forgive the punishment for the time being and do what we can to help the suffering wife.

GEORGE H. KING.

Editor AMERICAN:

May I add my mite by the inclosed $1 toward the relief of the unfortunate women, Mrs. R. A. Saunders, whose husband's confession you printed in last Sunday's AMERICAN? I believe this to be a worthy case, more so especially in the circumstances that poor Mrs. Saunders is placed in. There is every indication that she is deserving of all the help that may be sent for her relief. It seems hard to believe that enough funds may not be sent to her to tide her over her present condition. And I for one am very glad to offer my small amount cheerfully. Very truly yours,

PHILIP T. REYNOLDS.

"DR. DE LUXE" GIRL WINS BATHING SUIT

Miss Ada Bateman, one of the "Harum Scarum" girls in "Dr. De Luxe," has given positive proof that she has plenty of nerve although she is but a mite of a girl and weighs only 105 pounds. After a rehearsal the girls decided to go to Revere Beach to take a dip in the ocean. Howard Gale, press agent of the company, persuaded the girls to make a race of it, and offered a silk bathing suit to the one who would arrive at the beach first. The train was crowded and some of the girls stood in the doorway and on the steps of the coaches, ready to be the first off the train when it arrived. At Beachmont Miss Bateman left the train and ran forward. The other girls, thinking she had made a mistake, shouted that the station was not Revere, but Miss Bateman continued to run. When Revere was reached the girls made a hasty dash for the station and were properly shocked at finding Miss Bateman waiting for them. She had made the best lap of the race on the locomotive. Also she drew the new bathing suit.

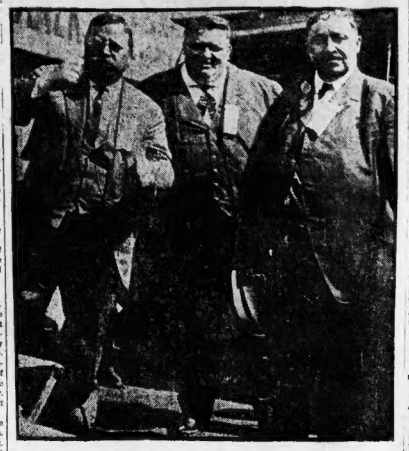
Three Happy Samples of Fat Men



From left to right these heavy men are J. M. Keyes of Concord, who weighs 245 pounds; Arthur H. Moulton of Portland, who at 342 pounds is the heaviest member of the club, and President William D. Quimby of Biddeford, who weighs 335. Mr. Keyes is remarkable for his resemblance to Colonel Roosevelt.

The skipper of the steamer raised his right hand and said solemnly, did he:

"Never again! No, never no more will I tempt fate by carrying the New England Fat Men's Club on my vessel. How will they get back to Boston? I don't know. I don't care. They can go back in Atwood's flying machine if they can. Or they can roll back. But I'll not risk my steamer again with 'em. I may be crazy, but I ain't no fool."

But the fat men only laughed at him. They were of the second day of their three-day Summer outing in Greater Boston.

The fatters marched from the Revere House to the boat at 8 o'clock. The streets corked as they rolled along. Over 150 were in the batch that sailed on the first boat.

Some of the weights that went up the bending gangplank were impressive. In mentioning names of club members it is customary to bracket the respective weight. So the list included the following:

J. W. D. Quimby of Boston (355), J. M. Keyes of Concord, Mass. (245), Arthur H. Moulton of Portland (442), H. M. Hunt of North Troy, Vt. (250).

Brother Keyes, who is a facial ringer for ex-President Roosevelt, started to dance on the deck. A deckhand stopped him in time.

GREAT PAGEANT OF WARSHIPS

sembled while in the big naval pageant in 1900, which was reviewed by King Edward, but 150 ships were in line.

The British fleet was in charge of Admiral Sir Arthur Moore, K. C. B., commander-in-chief of the Portsmouth Navy Yard.

A score of foreign ships participated. All of the ships in line were not men-of-war. Some were converted transports, and others were merchantmen, dressed out in their bravest colors, in honor of being inspected by the King, who was once a Chief of the Clearhouse; Sweden by the sea officer himself.

The English ships were distributed as follows:

Battleships, 26; armored cruisers, 25; protected cruisers, 7; destroyers, 84; torpedo boats, 12; submarines, 8; attached ships, 11.

There were ten British battleships of the Dreadnought type in the line. These are the Colossus, Hercules, Neptune, St. Vincent, Collingwood, Vanguard, Bellerophon, Temeraire, Superb and Dreadnought. To these were added four cruisers of the Invincible class, the Indefatigable, Indefatigable, Invincible and Indomitable.

MEDWAY HAS $60,000 FIRE

MEDWAY, June 24.—A $60,000 fire early to-day destroyed Sanford Hall, the principal business block of this town, and threatened a conflagration which would wipe out the centre of the town, until checked by the desperate efforts of firemen in Medway and those from neighboring communities who were called in with their apparatus to help.

Other buildings which were imperilled by the flames were the Dwyer residence and St. Joseph's Church. The blaze started in a lodge room, it was the most disastrous fire known in years.

The fire was discovered by Joseph M. Kelley of the New Medway Hotel.

It started in the rooms occupied by Medway Lodge No. 103, I. O. O. F., on the third floor. Engineer J. Edward Bancroft summoned all the fire fighting apparatus from West Medway and also sent word to Milford, seven miles away, for help. A steamer was dispatched from that place and made the trip here in four minutes. The Dwyer residence was nearest to the burning structure and, although on fire several times, was saved with but slight damage.

ARRAIGN THREE IN DEATH CASE

ALFRED, Me., June 24.—Olney Merrill of Pittston, John Bacon, a Boston farmer, and Mrs. Maude Snow, wife of "Dr." Trevor Snow, the confessed burglar, were brought into the District Court at 3 o'clock this afternoon and arraigned in connection with the Weymouth murder case.

The two men were charged directly with the murder of Charles Weymouth of Saco, whose body is supposed to be buried somewhere on the Mousam Snow farm at Dayton. Mrs. Snow was arraigned as an accessory to the killing. She and Bacon were brought into court this morning, but were stayed held for a continued session this afternoon, when Merrill was brought in with them.

Meanwhile the authorities are prodding the soil of the Snow farm in a way with long iron rods, trying to find the grave where Weymouth's body is thought to be.

The authorities today were pondering a remark said to have been made by Snow to the prison doctor. At the time it was supposed to relate to the part the gang accomplice. Now, although they have evidence that Snow was not at home when the murder is supposed to have been committed, the police attach to it a peculiar significance. Snow's remark was:

"If they could find the box as sound with chains and threw in the Saco River they would have a sensation."

Child Blurts Out Clew.

Nine-year-old Phyllis Snow is responsible for the arrests, for it was a childish remark from her that gave the authorities their first clew to what they now believe is the solution of the mystery of Weymouth's disappearance in September, 1905. Beatrice Snow, a younger sister, has amplified and corroborated the story told by Gladys and the authorities are convinced of its truth.

Sheriff A. R. Pennell had taken the children to the Snow place from Saco, where they have been in the charge of Mrs. Lydia Hiker, agent of the York County Children's Aid Society, since their father was sent to prison. He was seeking to recover what help some silver that was not found when thousands of dollars' worth of plunder was taken from the farm in 1905 and April. Gladys had pointed out where some of the silver was buried when suddenly she turned to the sheriff and said:

"And there's a man buried here, too. I saw him."

"What?" cried Pennell.

"Yes, sir," the girl answered, proud of her secret.

"Who was it?" she was asked.

Weymouth Drops From Sight.

"Mister Weymouth. Two men kicked him and beat him, and pretty soon he was a dender. Then they took a big box and put him in it. They had to stamp on him with their feet to make him fit in. I saw them bury him out near the woods after ward."

Weymouth was a "traveling butcher," which meant he traveled about the country in a small cart, peddling his wares. He dropped out of sight, mysteriously, in September, 1905.

Pennell astounded, put more questions to the little girl. He learned enough to lead him to believe that Weymouth was a member of the gang, and that he had been beaten to death by other members, because it was believed he was not dealing fairly. When the authorities believe they had enough evidence in their hands to warrant action, the arrests were made.

HARRIMAN MERGER OF PACIFIC RAILROADS IS UPHELD BY U. S. COURT

ST. PAUL, June 24.—The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals to-day handed down a decision upholding the legality of the Harriman merger, sustaining the Union Pacific's ownership of Southern Pacific stock. The majority opinion was read by Judge Adams, while Judge Hook dissented.

"The proof shows that after 1901, as well as before, the rates for transcontinental traffic were the same over both the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific lines," says the court, in its opinion.

"There has since then been, with respect to either line, no impairment of service, no deterioration of the physical properties, no discontinuance of efforts to satisfy the public, and no complaints of shippers of any injustice or inadequate service."

Suit Filed in 1908.

The suit to dissolve the Harriman combination of railroads was filed by the United States government in the United States Circuit Court, district of Utah, Feb. 1, 1908. Much of the testimony used in the suit was gathered in Chicago as the result of a long investigation here by Ralph McKenzie, special agent of the Department of Justice, who questioned many big business men and obtained a mass of facts against the railroads.

The action was the outcome of the most controversy between the administration and Mr. Harriman and the personal quarrel between the railroad wizard and Theodore Roosevelt, then President, had much to do with its starting.

The following were made parties defendant to the suit: Union Pacific Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad Company, Arizona Eastern, Santa Fe, Prescott & Phoenix Railway Company, Northern Railroad Company, Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, Edward H. Harriman, Jacob H. Schiff, Otto Kahn, Henry H. Rogers, Henry C. Pyne and William A. Clark.

Big Harriman Holdings.

The principal attack was centred on the Union and Southern Pacific parallel and competing lines, which the government alleged had ceased to compete since Harriman obtained control of both.

Great masses of evidence both documentary and verbal were gathered to prove the stifling of competition because of this merger.

The Santa Fe was made a defendant because Harriman owned $10,000,000 of its stock and the Great Northern because of similar stock ownership amounting to $35,000,000.

Anyone Can Begin to Solve Pictures Today!

The Boston AMERICAN'S $10,000 Proverb Contest has been running only a few days, but already it has raised a wave of popular interest that is sweeping throughout New England.

The PROVERB BOOKS about to be issued by the Contest Department for the convenience of the contestants are in great demand. Orders may now be sent for these books, which are now being printed, and which will be issued next week. A book will be mailed to any address on receipt of a money order for 25c., addressed to the "Proverb Contest Editor, Boston AMERICAN, 275 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass." Do not send cash or stamps.

The PROVERB BOOKS are attractively printed and arranged. They contain more than 3,000 proverbs, including all of the proverbs that will be represented by the picture puzzles in the contest. Obviously, therefore, they are of great aid in reaching quick solutions.

Within a few days the AMERICAN will announce the exact date on which the Contest Department will be ready to deliver back numbers on all of the puzzle pictures that have been appearing in the paper.

These back numbers will include answer blanks. They will be mailed in any quantity, for any or all dates, on receipt of the regular rates of the daily and Sunday AMERICAN (plus return postage) for the days on which they originally appeared.

This convenient arrangement makes it possible for anyone, anywhere, to enter the Proverb Contest at any time.

But in this, as in all important enterprises, an early start is an excellent thing

UNPARALLELED PRIZES.

The prizes offered in this contest are unquestionably the most attractive ever offered in a competition of this kind. They are not merely valuable rewards chosen haphazard, but carefully tested articles, selected with taste and discrimination, to bring the greatest pleasure to the greatest number.

Because the great Proverb Contest will come to its thrilling finish in the early Fall, the AMERICAN has arranged to have many prizes which will be especially appreciated and enjoyed in the Fall months.

The first prize is a handsome $2,500 Seashore Bungalow, the title to which will be fully guaranteed by the Massachusetts Title Insurance Company. The exact location of this property will soon be announced, and the details, including the plans and specifications of same, will be given.

Now, of course, a beautiful Summer home by the seashore is a thing of no particular season. It is useful in the Winter as in the Summer. And yet it is always in the Summer that the greatest enjoyment is obtained from the possession of a beautiful home such as this will be.

The second and third prizes are High Grade Runabout Automobiles. Some two contestants will be the proud owners of these two machines just at the time when the country is most beautiful, and when automobiling really is the most enjoyable.

The Runabout Automobile is really the handiest type of machine. It is safe and sane. It is a charming car for a woman to possess.

Next in the list comes two handsome Motor Boats—two clean-cut, solidly-built crafts. Everybody seems to be interested in Motor Boats nowadays. They offer an absolutely unique form of sport and pleasure. You can make a trip almost anywhere on a motor boat (if it is your own) at no more expense than you would have at home, and in the Fall, Spring and Summer months nothing is so enjoyable, so comfortable, so restful and so nerve-soothing as a trip by water.

The sixth and seventh prizes, High Grade Upright Pianos, will be welcome anywhere. To many a piano is the most longed-for possession. Well, to those, the opportunity of winning one, absolutely free, is offered you to-day.

If you are interested in Motorcycles, the AMERICAN'S Proverb Contest is still able to offer you satisfaction. Two of these useful speedy machines form the next two prizes.

And so, all down the list. Glance over the array of magnificent rewards offered for—what—just a little thinking each day—and don't forget 1,000 AMERICAN readers will actually receive prizes, all of value, and each one a prize to be really proud of.

Remember—nobody has a monopoly of knowledge about proverbs. Make use of the brains you have been endowed with and GRASP THIS OPPORTUNITY to financially as well as mentally benefit yourself.

26 PERSONS ARE SAVED IN FIRES

Twenty-six people, including eight children, were saved from flames and smoke at two fires early to-day. Bravery by tenants, police and by citizen rescuers marked the flight of the families from the burning buildings.

Ten persons were in danger of suffocation at No. 1 Groton street, South End. Timely discovery by Patrolman Guy H. Whitman of East Dedham street station saved them. Whitman carried out aged Michael O'Brien. Some lodgers assisted others in escaping.

Sixteen persons living in the five-story brick tenement house at Nos. 37 and 39 Garden street, West End, narrowly escaped being burned to death when flames, kindling in the basement, shot up an air shaft to the roof and burst out upon every floor. It was the third fire in this building in less than a year. The five families living in the building were assisted to the street by policemen and others.

The Garden street building is an eight-family house but three of the apartments were vacant. Samuel Neyer lived on the first floor with his wife and small children. They were awakened by cries of "Fire" and in the scramble for safety Mrs. Neyer was separated from husband and children. She was overcome by smoke and collapsed in a room off the hallway. She was found by Patrolman John Marston of the Joy street station, who carried her to the street. Mrs. Neyer was taken into the house of a neighbor and revived.

In the meantime her husband had succeeded in reaching the street with four of the children, but the other child, Adolph, five years old, could not be found. Several persons rushed into the house to search for her when David Chilkes of No. 5 Phillips street caught sight of the little one hanging out of a window and dragged her to safety.

Two children of Mrs. Louis Berkowitz were carried out over the fire escapes. They are four-year old Marian and two-year old Lawrence.

Mrs. Louis Beckman, carrying her infant son, Adolph, in her arms, fled down the fire escapes, too.

J. Rubin of No. 41 Anderson street helped Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Rubin down the stairs from the third floor. They were blinded by the smoke and had lost their coats on the stairs. David Rendal and his wife, Ida, who live on the second floor, were nearly overcome and had to be assisted to the street.

TWO CHILDREN WHO WERE SAVED IN BURNING HOME

Mrs. Louis Berkovitz carried her daughter Marion down the fire escape to safety in fire early to-day.

CAUSED GIRL TO KILL HIM BY AUTO-SUGGESTION, NEW THEORY IN LATSON CASE

PARIS, June 24.—An extraordinary story which may help to unravel the recent death in New York of Dr. William Latson was printed in the Temps on the authority of a Polish-Austrian playwright, Leopold Kampf. The long article is signed "Nozier," and is printed under the title "A New York Drama," and with this comment: "It is a strange story and I leave it to psychologists and American justice."

Kampf, according to the story, met Latson and a woman called merely "Anna" in New York in 1908, during the rehearsals of his play "Le Grand Soir." They became warm friends and soon the woman's friendship for the author grew to love. She confessed this to Dr. Latson, who continued to befriend Kampf, and for the sake of Anna's happiness tried to induce him to settle in New York.

Kampf, however, sailed for Europe three weeks after the beginning of the romance. For some time the two men corresponded, the doctor referring to "Anna" as "the child." Soon, however, the letters became less frequent and then stopped altogether.

Hero Kills Himself.

But the extraordinary personalities concerned in the romance had left a strong impression on Kampf's mind, the article says, and he decided to use the material for the theme of a play. He at once set to work and quickly finished "Mea et le Pinkin," which will be produced next October in Frankfurt, on the occasion of the inauguration of the new theatre. The three chief characters in the play are said to be faithful reproductions of Dr. Latson, the woman known as "Anna," and Kampf himself, so that the hero's name is hardly changed, it being Latson. Obliged to provide an ending for the play, Kampf makes his hero kill himself to leave the path free to the two sweethearts, who are always forbidden, and who only by their gratitude for him felt they could not marry as long as he lived.

As soon as the play was completed a few months ago, Kampf sent a copy to Latson and it is his theory that both the doctor and "Anna" have been the victims of autosuggestion. The doctor, he argues, might have read a message to his mother and sister and then compelled "Anna" to read over her shot which killed him. The complete story of the mysterious Latson's death is easily explained and Anna is necessarily innocent, for she would not have obeyed his will, and would have done nothing more than an instrument in his suicide.

Dr. W. H. C. Latson was found dead in his library at No. 660 Riverside Drive, New York, on the night of May 3, with a bullet in his brain. Beside him was a note addressed to his mother and reading:

"Mother and Gertie—I have come to the best.

"Will."

The landlord of the apartment house took in a young woman, whom he described only as "Miss Gordon" and supposed to be a nurse, with the physician two hours before his death was discovered. He said she had left the physician's apartment through the door, and then returned for her hat and coat by way of a front window on the ground floor.

Later the police identified the young woman as Alta Markevka, a Russian girl, who had been a sort of secretary and a devoted friend of Dr. Latson for a year. But she and he had been in love for a long time, and had studied hypnotism, osteology and philosophy together. After the physician's death Miss Markevka became convinced that she was not present at the time of the shooting of Dr. Latson, and that it was a case of suicide.

Miss Markevka, friend of Dr. Latson, the girl, who though twenty-one years old, seems to be a mere child, attempted to commit suicide by shooting in front of the apartment of Mrs. Jean Washington Bonaparte, 1321 Broadway, with whom she had been staying. She was later revived at the Washington Heights Hospital and arrested on a charge of attempted suicide. In court several days afterward she was released in custody of friends and relatives, who promised to take care of her.

Offered Leading Role.

When a reporter called at the home of Miss Markevka's sister, Mrs. Rebecca Cohen, of No. 60 East One Hundred and Tenth street, New York, last evening, the girl had just returned from a visit to friends. She was clothed in deep black. When asked whether she knew Leopold Kampf, she became at once visibly affected.

"Yes. What has happened to him?" she asked nervously. "What do you know about him?"

After the cablegram from Paris, stating Kampf's letter to Temps, had been shown to her she betrayed still greater emotion. For a few moments she did not speak. Then she said:

"I cannot talk about this now. Come later. Maybe I can talk about it then."

She would at first neither deny nor affirm anything contained in the cablegram, except to say that it was true Kampf had called her by the name of Anna. She wanted her to take the leading part in that name in a play he had written which she first met him, she said.

Miss Markevka finally consented to see the reporter and perhaps make a statement to him if he would call half an hour later, after she had time to consider what she wanted to say. When that time came she said:

"I met Dr. Kampf about three years ago through Dr. Latson. He got me the title of doctor through law studies at a German university. I know of him as a literary man and an intellectual, and if I remember rightly Dr. Latson first introduced him to me at a reception in a restaurant and a group of such literary people and intellectuals used to meet.

"We soon became well acquainted—in fact, we became very good friends. Dr. Kampf was then bringing out a play he had written with the title 'On the Ice.' It was to be produced at the New German Theatre in Irving place. Dr. Kampf suggested that I should play the leading part, under the name of Anna.

"I had been dreaming of going on the stage, but Anna in the play was to represent a simple, homely young woman, and I was not big or strong enough for that. I suppose Dr. Kampf spoke somewhat less jocularly of my taking the part. But I did not choose the speaking performance of the play at the German Theatre. It was produced on several other nights.

Met Author Frequently.

"I met Dr. Kampf frequently after that time, and so did Dr. Latson. We always discussed literary and intellectual topics. Dr. Kampf had a brilliant mind, and we both grew fond of his company.

"After he went away to Europe—I do not recall the precise time—I more heard of him again, though Dr. Latson did. Yes, I've frequently talked about him. Dr. Latson corresponded with him, too, I think. But I never heard of this second play which you tell me he brought out, containing characters, modeled on Dr. Latson and myself. I don't think Dr. Latson heard of it either. If he had received a copy of the manuscript he would certainly have told me about it.

"Asked whether there had ever been any talk between her and Dr. Latson looking toward a separation that she might join Dr. Kampf, she said they had often talked together and about Dr. Kampf, but that would not make any further statement as to the nature of their conversation in this regard.

Concerning the theory of Dr. Kampf that Dr. Latson's death had been brought on by auto-suggestion, due to reading the manuscript of Dr. Kampf's play, she would only say:

"That is nonsense. I do not believe he ever saw the manuscript, and I am sure he never read it or spoke of it to me. I know nothing about that play. I know only about the one Dr. Kampf wrote before he met me—the one in which 'Anna' played. I heard from friends, with whom he and Dr. Latson and I used to associate, that he had written plays since, but I have heard nothing from him since he went away. I did not even know where he had gone."

TEACHERS SAIL FOR A TOUR OF EUROPE

Carrying more passengers than she ever had aboard before, the Bohemian of the Leyland line sailed for Liverpool at 7:30. Many school teachers are among the seagoers.

Miss Page, daughter of United States Senator Charles S. Page of Vermont, is booked on the liner with Miss Ethel Hutchinson of Washington. They are to spend two months in a general European trip. Another traveler, Evans Spalding of this city, had booked passage on the St. Paul of the American line, but the sailing of that vessel was canceled because of the seamen's strike in Europe. He will go by the Bohemian.

CHILDREN AT PLAY DISCOVER SKELETON

WINSLOW, Me., June 23.—Children playing in a sand bank here unearthed a human skeleton. The police were notified and Coroner S. L. Berry of Waterville will make an investigation. No one has been able to explain how the skeleton was buried or how long it had been in the sand. A physician gave it as his opinion that the remains were those of a person about fifteen years old.

TWO PHOTOS OF MARJORIE HAMILTON, THE FAMOUS "CALENDAR GIRL," SHOWING HER REDUCTION OF 37 LBS. IN FIVE WEEKS.

Marjorie Hamilton, known throughout America as the famous "Calendar Girl," is now recognized as the greatest known expert in the art of fat reduction, and she advises only simple, natural methods of reducing double chin and excess fat.

She is now employed as the highest priced exclusive photographic model for art calendars in America, demanding one hundred dollars per hour from noted Calendar Houses. Her face and figure beauty has an abundance of superfluous flesh before her present figure. It had demanded by photographic artists, she set about to reduce her weight. She says: "I tried a seriously simple method of her own.

No harmful drugs or terrible massage. No starving. No painful physical culture exercises; no starvation diet. Nothing to take internally. No poison stuff to rub on body and none of the old, ridiculous, harmful dieting methods are used in her splendid new treatment.

Miss Hamilton, from Portland Ave., writes in and says he considers this the most scientific fat reducing treatment in the world.

The free book of this Queen of Beauty explains in her own words, how by pure, natural, harmless treatment, they say reduce ponderous weight at the rate of one pound or more daily. How any man or woman may banish double chin quickly and regain new health and vigor.

Our readers will be astonished to learn for the first time of a really new, marvel combination system of "FAT REDUCTION, as referred to in this splendid book, and now offered free to our readers for a short time.

A letter from W. L. Schmitz, from Mandeville, Minn., states he has tried several but lost 17 pounds in fifteen days and he is the happiest man in the world that he is losing 2 pounds daily.

You will be amazed to know how rapid ly you may reduce your double chin and excess fat by following her instructions and using her new combination treatment. All fat men and women, of any age, who desire to make themselves more attractive, should secure this wonderful book free, as it will improve your figure quickly by her methods.

Mrs. H. of California, writes in and says she has already lost 14 pounds the first week.

This book is written in a fascinating style. It explains how, by her treatment, this famous beauty developed from a lean, the raging "Calendar Girl" of the present day, reducing her own weight THIRTY-SEVEN POUNDS IN FIVE WEEKS by purely natural methods, and without resorting to starving, which she did, or using fat external stuff to rub on the body, or harmful exercises. It is safe to say her treatment is similar to that used by famous French actresses and the noted ladies of Europe, who dare not grow fat.

Write at once, dear, dear reader, the anguish she felt when her girlish body suddenly developed into abnormal proportions. Read of the terrors she felt when the monster fat made her realize that the man she had hoped to marry, fled into oblivion.

Learn how she experimented, and with determination and grit conquered fat. Learn of these things as you would learn your own form and destroy your fat as it will not be longer necessary for you to subject yourself to the awful dangers of ridiculous drugs.

Violent exercises, starvation diets and poisonous drugs, also harmful external stuff to rub on her body, were all of no benefit. So, realizing that if she desired to longer continue as the star in her profession, and be longer sought after by artists, famous heads of Americ a and Europe, she must do something quick to prevent the ravages of fat from ruining her beauty. She studied on an entirely original and different plan, and after repeated efforts and many failures, made what she considers a wonderful scientific discovery, by means of which she has perfected a treatment which actually reduces the weight in a remarkably short time, and adds to the strength and health of the individual with every pound taken off.

This woman's remarkable success has caused her friends who stand aghast in astonishment, marveling at her wonderful skill. She refused to be simple, yet it is looked upon with curiosity and admiration. She says a good yet quick reducation treatment any person should reduce their flesh in the privacy of their own homes without medical assistance in many cases at the rate of one pound or more daily.

Mrs. C. Bell writes in a grateful letter stating she is losing a pound a day.

Mrs. L. Palmer writes the new treatment is wonderful and the safest thing she ever used. She lost 9 pounds the first few days, and states her abdomen is four inches smaller.

It is simply astonishing the number of men and women who write in, regarding the wonderful results of her new process for banishing fat.

The second week after using your treatment and new system I lost eight and one half pounds. So delighted was I that I kept right on using it, and at the end of the fifth week I had lost thirty-two pounds and felt like a young woman. My health has improved, my headaches have entirely left me, and what delights me most I have eight inches smaller around the hips. I kept right on eating everything I craved. I consider your system the only perfect one known for a speedy and sure reduction of flesh."

Much interest is shown in this new remarkable method by letters from distinguished physicians which proves that their patients are obliged to give up drugs and acknowledged this woman's combination treatment superior to all others.

The distinguished physician, Dr. Walter Robinson, writes in and says:

"It is with much pleasure that I offer congratulations upon this splendid method of treatment for the reduction of superfluous flesh and double chin. Nothing, in my opinion, could be more effective. This is the only scientific method of treatment endorsed by the medical profession. I consider your method of treatment not only original, but remarkably clever and the only truly scientific way to reduce superfluous flesh and double chin harmlessly and quickly."

Miss Ellen LaVelle writes in and says: "The treatment is most wonderful, so easy, safe and so rapid. It was such relief not to be obliged to use medicine or

Artist Exposes a Cigar Fraud

Gus Mager of the AMERICAN'S funmaker staff earned the gratitude of the Boston Cigarmakers' Union when he had "Sherlocks the Monk" show how "Mr. Goodthings's" supposedly pure Havana cigars, smuggled in from Cuba, were imitations that could be sold at very low rates.

The cigarmakers of this city had spent thousands of dollars trying to educate the local "Goodthings" from a fakir who has worked the same old "smuggling" game in Boston for years past. But, the officers of their union say, they weren't making much headway—until Artist Mager put Sherlocks on the trail.

Warnings Went Unheeded.

Despite the repeated warnings of Edward Broders, president of the Boston union, the oily smile of the black-haired stranger continued to lure good dollars from the pockets of local business men. Even the protests of Henry Abrahams, the veteran secretary of that union, were unavailing until Sherlocks got busy.

"Cut the chatter, and blow away, my boy, blow away. I'm wise to this little Cuba-cigar smuggling-game-of, since Sherlocks put the AMERICAN readers next. Do blow away, my boy, blow!" said a cigar man, smuggled in from Cuba, who approached by the stuttering stranger a few days ago.

"Aramino! The Senor to me to offer me liquid! His Sherlocks I am acquaint not wit. My segars she am smuggle from no Havana in. She are from my own good factory in so whole lgod of——"

"Let's give them the Sherlocks test, then," broke in the State street man. And suiting his actions to his words, he spunk the box of "smuggled" smokers bottom-side up. There he found, even as Sherlocks had discovered in the "Goodthings" case, a United States government stamp that proved that the alleged Havana cigars really were made in New Jersey.

Fakir Reaped a Harvest.

"But the most peculiar feature of the whole proceeding is that we had spent thousands of dollars trying to educate these same business men to look for that government stamp, and failed," said Henry Abrahams, secretary of the Boston Cigarmakers' Union, during the absence of the president.

"The more enormous our woe, the more cigars were sold by this fakir with a counterfeit Spanish name. This idea of buying smuggled cigars for half price seemed to fascinate a large number of business men, until Sherlocks got our work on the cartoon page of the AMERICAN. Let Gus Mager but give us another such cartoon, showing that these 'smuggled' cigars are manufactured in the tenement house districts of New York and New Jersey (as they are) and it will be all off with fake Cubans the State over."

If Gus Mager ever feels like applying for honorary membership in the Cigarmakers' Union his chances of indorsement by the Boston local are said to be excellent.

SPEED BOYS TRY FOR THIRD GAME

Sometimes the unexpected happens. It did when the Red Sox punctured the World's Champs for a pair of wins in one afternoon. Just goes to show what a great game this national pastime of ours is. At this hour yesterday you couldn't have found a man who would have bet one bone against a gingersnap that the Red Sox would take one, let alone two.

All of which means that there will be a rush at the bat on this holiday afternoon that John I. Taylor will have to slip inside the grounds with a shoe-horn. It will be a well-deserved crowd, especially if Patsy Donovan's crew keeps on its merry way at the clip they hit yesterday.

Patsy will please not feel offended if the thought is expressed that the double victory was a jolt on our nerves. Welcome, 'tis true, but nevertheless a jolt. Here come the Sox back from a trimming off vaiif of the proportions of the pants of the Highlanders, the pride team of the American League—just so far as its pretentious to a pennant is concerned—and here come the World's Champs, fresh from entering of wins since they lost finished wiping up the ground with the Senators and yet the Sox do the trick as easy as if they were the Champs.

20,000 Saw Game.

A grand crowd, well over the 20,000 mark, saw the contests. Looked like the old days to see 'em all out and rooting like that. And maybe there won't be more of it this afternoon. There are three more games to be played with the Mackmen, including one to-day, and Donovan says he is going to get at least one of the three. To-day may be the day. If not then Monday sure says Patsy. Ills dope sounds good. He has disposed of Jack Coombs, the man who put the Cubs on the fritz in the world's championship games, and he has also polished off Eddie Plank, a most to-be-feared hearer of the Mack tribe. That leaves big Chief Bender to be reckoned with, and if he can be pickled all will be well. Three out of five from the Athletics is or ought to be, enough to satisfy the most rabid Sox partisan.

The scores in yesterday's games don't tell half of the story. Both contests were full of corking good plays that pulled the big crowd up to its rooting along every two minutes. It isn't often, even in the face of the figures of freak baseball results that you see a double-header won by the work of one inning each. Joe Wood is entitled to all the kind things you can say about him for that first game. He was touched up harder than Coombs, but that swat of his was the pathfinder for Mr. Speaker, and it spilled the beans then and there.

The Sparrow Incident.

Coincidentally to relate, Karger, the pitcher in the second game, and quite a hand also in turning the ride in favor of his team. He smote a double in the fourth inning which brought in two runs and put the game on the safe side of the ledger.

We must not leave word of the contest without more than passing note to Mr. Williams, g. s. If you don't know what that means look up your Bible. It means Good Samaritan. Mr. Williams is on the bench for the Sox just at present, but he is a pro all the same. He was walking through the alley from the dressing room to the pit just before the first game started and a little specimen—a tiny little fellow, hard at able to fly—fell on his cap. Come to think about it, the darn little thing couldn't fly, else it wouldn't have fallen on Mr. Williams's lid at all. Anyhow, Mr. Williams tickled it up, treated it to a drink of water and took it out to the bench with him. More than that he had his picture taken with it on his knee.

CREWS AT WORK IN TIME TRIAL

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, RED TOP, Ct., June 24.—Harvard crews had their hardest work yesterday since arriving at the training quarters this season. Shortly after 7 last night the varsity and freshman eights were sent over the course at racing speed for the first time this year on the Thames, and the result of these trials was most satisfactory to Coach Wray. The time given out was 20:37.

Gordon H. Balch was in his regular seat at bow last night and showed no signs of weakness from his injured knee, which was tightly bandaged, and he will surely row in the bout June 30. The race last night was rowed almost in the dark, this being caused by the tide not turning until 6:30. The crews reached the bridge at about twenty minutes to 8. They started off across from the quarters, both rowing 38, but soon slowed down to 36, which was maintained until the mile flag was reached, where the varsity was leading by two boat lengths. The varsity kept on to the bridge, stroking the next mile and half 32 to 34, the last half mile to 37, reaching the four-mile mark in twenty minutes and fifty-seven seconds. No time was taken of the freshman boat. The morning work consisted of short pushes and racing starts for all crews. The usual quiet pleasant day, hearing the returns of the Harvard-Yale game in the afternoon and in the evening witnessed the celebration of the baseball victory, consisting of a huge bonfire, red lights and fireworks.

END OF COUNTRY CLUB MEETING

With four steeplechase races furnishing every type of the timber-topping horse, and three flat races, the thirtieth running of the Country Club, Brookline, running horse meeting will be brought to a close to-day.

Mr. McMurtrie is going to run both Algie and Selectus in the annual steeplechase. Algie has twice won the cup, and another win of it gives the owner permanent possession of the trophy. Algie will carry the top weight, 160 pounds, and Selectus twelve pounds less. Med Henderson, the crack Canadian rider, responded to a hurry call from Mr. McMurtrie, and he arrived at Clyde Park last night. He will ride either Selectus or Algie. Aside from these two the race brings into action several of the best chasers in the country. Watergoal, winner of the Gloucester cup, Ontario, Lylda, Bishop and Colligny. Donohoe will ride the last named horse. The cash value of this race is $1,250, and the cup is worth $250.

Widener's Horses Enter.

Mr. Widener is another owner who says that he will start two of his horses in one event, this the steeplechase for qualified hunters. The Widener horses are Synchronized and Lenape. Hereford will carry the top weight at 175 pounds, and K will be seen at Clyde Park for the first time. Lieutenant Rockwell of the corps of engineers, who on Saturday last demonstrated his ability as a rider, will guide O. K., and the officer bought this horse especially for this race. Lieutenant R. P. Tate of the Fifteenth Cavalry and Lieut. Myer, one of the best riders in the Federal army, will ride Knight of Elwar. Lieutenant Tate has won all three steeplechases this year at Richmond, Baltimore and at Belmont Park. Lieutenant Adair of the Tenth Cavalry will ride Tampico, Knight of Elwar and Tampico were purchased for the show in the International show at the Olympic in London, but the demand for them at the meetings in this country was so great that it was thought best to change the program.

NAVY WRESTLERS TO MEET IN PRELIM

Joe Gordon, lightweight champion of the navy, and Joe Olsen of New York, are matched to wrestle one of the preliminaries to the world's championship match between George Bothner, the title holder, and Will Bingham of England at American League Park, next Tuesday night. Gordon, who is an exceptionally clever fellow. Olsen is a Swede, who has shown excellent form in the West.

The contest between Bothner and Bingham promises to be exceptionally clever, as Bingham is a product of the Lancashire district, the home of modern catch-as-catch wrestling, where the sport is as popular as baseball is with us. The fielding for as baseball is with us. The fielding arrangement will be the most perfect thing of its kind ever seen in Boston.

STAR ATHLETES AT TECH FIELD

Nearly every prominent local athlete will compete in the New England track and field championships, to be held at Tech Field this afternoon. There will be champions of intercollegiate fame, pastime champions, interscholastic crack performers and representatives from the Boston Athletic Association, the Brookline Gym, the South Boston A. C., and other minor athletic organizations. All will strive for the medals emblematic of the New England championship.

The contest for point honors promises to attract a great deal of attention. All the local clubs have mustered the strongest possible aggregations and all are keenly after the point trophy.

B. A. A. Favorites.

The B. A. A. team, however, is the logical favorite for the banner. Manager George Brown has collected one of the strongest teams that ever represented the Unicorn Club, and from the sprints to the weight events is expected to score heavily.

In the short distance events great interest is sure to centre in the meeting of Harry Drew, the colored interscholastic champion; Freddy Burns, the Exeter flier; R. D. Young, the intercollegiate 440 champion; R. L. Snow, formerly of Williams; Nat Sherman, the former Dartmouth champion; Stanley Llewellyn, the Brown interscholastic champion; Francis O'Hara, of the B. A. A., and the Bowser brothers of the South Boston A. C. All these runners have proved their mettle, and a battle royal is certain.

Fast Quarter-Miters.

In the quarter-mile the Unicorn Club will have a trio of the fastest runners that ever competed in the local district. Billy Prout, Lester, and D. B. Young, will represent the Back Bay club, and all are travelling faster than ever.

In the half-mile Bingham, the Exeter crack, is booked to meet H. N. Hobden, the New England intercollegiate champion.

Oscar Hedlund, the Brookline crack, should easily win the mile, as he has better his performance of last year. The five-mile run will bring together McVicker and Joe Silva of the South Boston A. C.

A. L. Gutherson, the Vermont all-round crack, will wear the colors of the B. A. A., and is carried to win both hurdle divisides the broad jump.

P. S. Dalrymple, Sam Lawrence, Gidney and Johnstone will meet in the high jump, while Dan Sherman, the old Harvard weight thrower, and Bill Coe will meet in the shot-put and hammer throw.

As the games will be a tryout for the National championships at Pittsburg next Saturday, and as no admission will be charged, a great crowd is predicted.

For best story of this event see the Sunday AMERICAN.

CATHOLIC SOCIETIES HOLD FIELD GAMES

Sporting events will play a prominent role in big outing and field day to be held under the auspices of the United Catholic Societies of Somerville, at Lexington Park to-day. Three ball games, the St. Joseph's Alumni vs. St. John the Baptist of St. Ann's Church. The Mt Benedict Order of Knights of Columbus vs. Mt. Pleasants of Roxbury, and the Bennett A. A. vs. the Alpine A. A., a hurling match between the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, will be the big feature events. The track events include a 50-yard dash for boys under fifteen, a 50-yard dash for girls under fifteen, one-mile run, fat men race, rope-climbing contest, running broad jump, running hop, step and jump, relay races between teams of different organizations, a ball throwing contest, and 100-yard dash for the championship of Somerville.

COLUMBIA WRESTLING SEASON IS CLOSED

The closing of the wrestling season at the Columbia last night was marked by good work in both matches, the contest between Joe Turner, the Southern middleweight champion, and Jim Lucas (who substituted for Klenke), being particularly fast, Turner winning with a giant swing that put his lovely opponent out for a couple of minutes. Hjalmar Lundin forfeited to Jack Lucas, who in the latter secured a vicious hold and put the Swede's leg out of commission. The bout was stubbornly contested, lasting 1 hour and 4 minutes.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 23.—The Hustlers, headed by Manager Tenney and Captain Kling, are prepared to meet the Phillies in the second of a four-game series to-day. The Quakers are anxious to make a good showing on this long stay at home, and "Reds" Doolin said that he would use his best pitchers in the box, with the mask on his own face.

"We made somewhat of a change in our batting order," said Manager Tenney of Boston, but our battery work is uncertain. Kling will catch and the best men in form, McTigue, Weaver, Griffin or Ferguson, will do the pitching.

All manner of rumors were afloat today as regards possible trades in the Philadelphia camp. Horace Fogel and Manager Doolin being very much displeased with Earl Moore's work.

"There is nothing to the rumored desire of Moore for Bell of Brooklyn," said President Fogel this morning. "We have several big trades in view, however, and I regret very much that we did not get

Harvard and Yale Stars Off To-day

Harvard athletes set sail from New York to-day to England in company with their Yale companions on the steamer Vaterland. The Harvard men who are making the trip are Barker, Cable, Cummings, Kelley, Jaques, Lawless, Preble, Ryan, Withington, Howard and Captain Reggie Foster. The last named will, however, make the trip as a visitor and not as a competitor.

The Yale athletes who are making the trip are Thatcher, Reilly, Stewart, Holden, Kilpatrick, Chisholm, Canfield and Childs. The Yale representatives were cut down in number, owing to the fact that the Englishmen do not have the shotput and pole vault or the low hurdles.

BALDWIN LOSES IN 20 ROUNDS

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 24.—Referee Hanlon awarded the decision to Fred Welsh, at the end of the 20-round contest between the Welshman and Matty Baldwin at the Auditorium. The Britisher was too clever for the Boston boy, and although there were many in the house who called "draw" at the beginning of the twentieth round, there was not a murmur when Hanlon raised Welsh's glove in token of victory.

Welsh's principal blow was a left jab which caught Matty on the nose and mouth nearly every time he started it. He cut Matty's lip in the first round and the blood from the Boston boy's lips was kept flowing throughout the battle. This cut lip was the only mark of battle that either contestant bore when the fight was over.

Welsh showed a marvellous defence, and the few blows that he received during the fight did not even raise a pink hue on his body. In addition to his left jab, Welsh worked his right on Baldwin's body considerably, and a kidney punch which he seemed to have no difficulty in landing had a good deal to do with stopping the effectiveness of Baldwin.

The rounds were very much alike. Welsh was the aggressor throughout almost the entire fight. Baldwin made a gallant rally in the twentieth round and showed that he was still fresh enough and able to toe to toe with his clever adversary and slamming away with both hands.

Some Class to Baseball Wages

The highest salaried big league team is said to be Frank Chance's Chicago National League Club, in spite of the fancy price paid to Mathewson at New York and Cobb, Crawford and Mullin of the Tigers. The three Cub outfielders, Schulte, Sheckard and Hoffman, draw down a total of $12,000 a year, Hofman getting more than either of the other two. Evers and Kling are close to the $5,000 mark. Mordecai Brown is over it and Tinker gets in the neighborhood of $4,000. Chance himself pulls out $10,000 straight salary and nine shares in the dividends of the club.

MIDDLEBORO LOSES PITCHER

MIDDLEBORO, June 24.—The local baseball fans are somewhat chagrined at the transfer of Harry Smythe, the clever little southpaw twirler of the local Trolley League team, to the Brockton team of the New England League, and are wondering who will be on the mound to today's game with Stoughton. Smythe has pitched very fast ball here the past two seasons and was working out in fine shape when he signed with Brockton. Managers Murphy and O'Toole of the local team are in a quandary as to who will be the pitcher the remainder of the season. In fact, there is no surety of a steady pitcher for at least some time until the several candidates are given a tryout. The names of Swift, the supposed Fairhaven twirler; Murphy of New Bedford, who pitched a last game here Memorial Day, and Capt. of Fall River, who did exceptionally speedy work last season here on the mound, are mentioned. Swift is in other ways is in good condition and is at the top of the list in the Trolley League standing.

POTTER CHOSEN TEAM CAPTAIN

By TED PARKE.

Robert Sturgis Potter, Harvard's star second baseman, will lead the Crimson team next year. His friends hope it will be such a season as was closed yesterday afternoon on Soldier's Field by Harvard defeating their ancient rivals, Yale, 4 to 1.

Directly after the game the team adjourned to the Hotel Lenox, where a banquet was held following which the captain was chosen.

Potter is from Philadelphia. He has held down the second sack on the Harvard team for the past years, and has proved himself one of the most consistent batters of a Harvard nine. With the exception of a couple of games this past season when the whole team seemed to have fallen into a slump, he fielded his position faultlessly and figured as the pivotal point in practically every double play that Harvard pulled off this year. His easy going and assuring manner should give balance to the Crimson aggregation and lead them to a successful year.

Is Football Player.

He played on his freshmen team three years ago in the position he now holds on the varsity. In addition he is one of Harvard's most dependable men on the quarterback position on the varsity eleven, and between him and Wigglesworth the centre garden man on the nine, will be the generalship of the eleven next Fall.

Judging from what Coach Sexton has been able to do with material which this year at the beginning seemed to be the poorest that Harvard has had for some years, next year with practically the whole team returning to college and some good material coming to the varsity from this past season's freshmen nine, an unusually successful year should be the result. Coach Sexton has shown that he is the best coach Harvard has ever had, and despite the graduation loss this year, the season has been remarkably successful, for not since 1901 has Yale been defeated in two straight games.

Harvard Loses Pitcher.

Harvard loses Captain McLaughlin and Sexton, both twirlers, and Hann, the first baseman by graduation. The entire outfield, Babson, Clifford and Wigglesworth, and the infield with the exception of first base, remain intact. Better prospects could hardly be desired. The only weakness next year, as was the case this past year, will be in the pitching staff, as neither Waterman or Boyle, the freshmen box artists, are above the average, but under the guidance of the new coach, either of these men may be developed into good stuff.

In addition Felton the football player, may be in good standing and his presence will mean much to the twirling end of the team. He is one of the best pitchers potentially Harvard has seen for some time, but trouble with the college office kept him out of the game this year. He has two more years and he may be the find of the next Spring.

WALSH AND BURNS WILL MEET JULY 11

Jimmy Walsh and Frankie Burns of New York are matched to meet in a ten-round contest at the Twentieth Century A. C. of New York on the night of July 11. The boxers have agreed to weigh 118 pounds at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the contest. Burns at first demanded that the weight be made at ringside, but Walsh refused.

Umpire Wallops Rajah Bresnahan

CINCINNATI, O., June 24.—The strange sight of a National League umpire taking a healthy wallop at a National League manager was seen at the conclusion of the Red-Cardinal battle at League Park. Umpire Klem tried to land a right hook on the "Rajah's" jaw, Bresnahan blocked the blow with his elbow and made no effort to return it.

As Umpire Klem started to leave the field, Roger came up behind him and said something in his ear. Klem pulled back his left arm and threatened to strike, but thought better of it and turned again to leave the field. Bresnahan followed him up, and suddenly Klem turned around, dropped his mask and aimed a stinging right-hand blow at Roger's jaw. Up went Bresnahan's left arm and he received the force of the blow on his elbow. Both Klem and Bresnahan sent statements of the affair to President Lynch by wire. Roger claims that he used no bad language to Klem. Klem asserts that there was more to his line of talk than a simple remark.

CAPONI BOXES M'MAHON HERE

In the main bout of 12 rounds at the Armory A. A. next Tuesday night, two boxers of national reputation, who are new to New England fans, will appear. They are Tony Caponi, the Chicago Italian who has met practically all the leading middle and light-heavyweights in the country and recently boxed a 10-round draw with Sam Langford, and Tom McMahon of Pittsburg, who has been meeting all the Eastern boxers of reputation with great success during the past year. Caponi and McMahon ought to put up one of the ruggedest bouts seen in Boston in a long time.

BIG BENEFIT FOR NEWSBOYS

All up for the big night at the Columbia Theatre next Wednesday evening, to help the fund for an outing for the newsboys of Boston on the Fourth of July.

The plans for a monster benefit to give the newsies of this city a good time on the Fourth, are nearly completed by the committee in charge. This is one of the moves toward a safe and sane celebration of Independence Day, and everybody should make it a point to help the good cause along.

The program consists of several wrestling bouts between some of the best wrestlers in the vicinity of Boston; vaudeville acts, and a lecture by Richard W. Sears, the Boston AMERICAN photographer, which will be illustrated by stereopticon views. Dick, as he is called by everyone, promises to give the best talk of his career, explaining how he got pictures of people who don't want to have them taken. He also has a collection of baseball pictures, second to none, which he will show.

John J. Memphian and William Stevens, two of the famous cartoonists of the AMERICAN staff, have offered their services, and each will draw some of the most comical cartoons ever seen on the stage.

Herbert W. Cooke, the well-known wrestling expert, has volunteered to referee the wrestling matches.

Joe Callahan, of the AMERICAN staff, will give a talk. Those who have ever heard Joe before, will be sure to be on deck when he starts in, as he is one of the wittiest speakers in Boston, and always keeps his audience in good humor.

Harry Edels, of the Columbia Theatre, will master of ceremonies, and, as he always keeps things moving, there will be something doing all the time. Joe McCarthy, the well known South Boston sporting man, will give a gymnastics sketch, which promises to be the best yet.

Tickets are on sale at the AMERICAN office. The prices of admission are 75 cents, balcony 50 cents, and the gallery 25 cents.

Watch the AMERICAN for announcement of the program from day to day.

JOHNSON SAYS "NO" TO RUMOR

CHICAGO, June 24.—The reports of a proposed transfer of the Detroit team of the American Baseball League to St. Louis, on the principle that Detroit was not a paying baseball city, were denied today at the office of President Johnson of the league. He said that such a transfer would be contrary to the rules of the league, and had not been considered.

DETROIT, Mich., June 24.—The Detroit News says today:

"Because of small attendance this season at the games played here by the Detroit team the franchise of the Detroit club may be transferred to St. Louis. The team now representing St. Louis would be transferred to another city and Detroit be left out of organized baseball.

"Several recent conferences between President Johnson of the American League and other club owners are reported to have been for the purpose of taking Detroit's franchise away.

"I have heard nothing definite," said President Navin of the Detroit club today, "but I would not object to selling the club. We are not losing money in Detroit, but neither are we making a dollar, and I have grown somewhat leary of kicks from other club owners all this year."

The Detroit Journal today prints a report that the rumored changes involve bringing the St. Louis Americans to this city in exchange for the Detroit club.

DONOVAN AND MULLIN FEEL STRAIN OF GAMES

It is believed that Detroit's veteran pitchers, Donovan and Mullin, are feeling the effect of the early strain in keeping the Tigers at the top and that sooner or later they will lose their effectiveness. Jennings appears to be looking into the future by developing younger lumbers to take the places of the oldtimers.

FIELDER JONES IS DOWN-EASTER

William Jones, the new outfielder of the Boston Nationals from Portsmouth, Ohio, is a down-easter, born and raised in the State of Maine, Carrigan and Parent coming from the town of Millinocket, in northern Maine.

Jones got his first real money for playing baseball in 1907, when he got a job with George Beardman, the New England Leaguer, who was player-manager of Waterville in the Maine State League, catching until Waterville quit. Then he hooked up with Jack Iott's Bangor team, with which Ray Collins of the Boston Red Sox was the first string pitcher and Larry Gardner third baseman. While at Bangor Jones changed from a backstop to an outfielder and has played that position ever since. In 1908 Jones played the entire season with Bangor, which won the championship.

In 1909 Jones played on his home team, which won the Aroostook League championship, Billy leading the bunch with the stick. Earlier in the season he tried out with Scranton in the New York State League, but went out of form.

Last year he signed with Portsmouth in the Ohio State League and played the best ball of his career helping the team to land the pennant. He played in fifty-seven games, standing third in the league in batting with an average of .336. In fielding he accepted eighty-one chances with three errors, giving him an average of .963. He played the season of 1909 without a fielding error.

Jones has a fruit and confectionery store down in Millinocket. He is something of a hunter and is sure to get his legal allowance of moose and two deer each year.

JIMMY WALSH NOT TRAINING IN CHICAGO

Two stories have been sent from Chicago regarding Jimmy Walsh, which are denied by Eddie Keevin, Walsh's manager. The first one states that Jimmy Walsh refused to box Harry Forbes at a place called Janesville, Wis., and the other story said he was in Chicago training at a gymnasium there. Walsh never received any offer from Janesville or any place else to box Forbes, according to Keevin, and Jimmy has not been in Chicago within two years.

The haunted house is still doing business at the same old stand. The thick air of mystery in which it is shrouded has not been clarified one bit, up to date, and the spirits who live therein are just as busy as ever.

A lot of time has been wasted on this vacant house by the kids in the neighborhood. To tell the truth, we are quite saggy about it. What we are getting paid for is baseball dope; in fact, writing about haunted houses is not in our contract at all. When we were appointed to do publicity work for the Yung Amerika Matamated Baseball Lege, we expected, naturally enough, to write first class, up-to-the-minute baseball news and nothing more.

Since Puggy Mullane discovered the haunted house and brought out this mys-terious person with the flour sack over his head, called the "Great Unknown," we cannot gather anything in the way of baseball goody. Even at the games, half the talk in the bleachers, and even in the grandstand, is about the haunted house and the "Great Unknown."

If Puggy Mullane started out to get anybody's goat he succeeded. Even ours has began to wander from home.

Perhaps the mystery will be cleared up today at the game. The "Great Unknown" will be on hand to pitch for the Unpeelers against "Eindebenk" Spruder, who will do the honors for the Starfish Giants. This "Great Unknown" is supposed to be the greatest pitcher in the world. Puggy Mullane, who owns him, and has rented him to the Unpeelers for this week only, leaves about him. So far as we know he might be all that "Puggy" claims. We have never seen him work. Our impression of him is a winking flour sack.

"Puggy" Mullane just this minute rung up on the telephone and wanted to give us an interview. We knew that it was going to be more dope about his marvelous "Great Unknown," so we hung up. We have all we can stand now.

Emily Morton is mad at "Skinny" Shaner again. She says that he is a great big chances to one that she will make up bluffing coward. This is quite a shock to society circles, as "Skinny" was supposed to have a pretty good stand-in with Emily.

The haunted house is to blame for all the trouble. "Skinny" was trying to make Emily think he was not afraid to take a look in the front window and defy the spirits, and Emily called his bluff. Emily is as changeable as the weather. If the Starfish Giants win this afternoon, ten to one Emily will be mad at "Skinny" again. She says that he is a great big coward. This is quite a shock to society circles, as "Skinny" was supposed to have a pretty good stand-in with Emily.

"Skinny" Flynn is trying to get us to print a special article on haunted houses which he has written. He says he will not charge us a cent, as he needs the practise. When he grows up he intends to be a war correspondent. To save our lives we cannot see what haunted houses have to do with baseball leagues, so we are afraid we will have to turn the future war correspondent down.

Stories of Real Life Showing It Is Never Too Late to Begin.

By THOMAS I. TAPPER

I.

THE manufacturer of a popular patent medicine that is billboarded all over the United States used to ride home back a good deal and wore a long black cloak in bad weather. One day he mounted his horse and rode out to visit a music teacher, whom we will call Mr. Van, though that is not his name.

The patent medicine man was then seventy years old. He dismounted from his horse and went into the musician's studio.

"Mr. Van," he began, "will you promise not to laugh at what I am going to say?"

Mr. Van promised and waited.

"I am over seventy," said the medicine man, "and all my life I have been a lover of music. I have a fine organ in my house. I often invite singers and players to come and perform for me. Now, I have listened to music all my life, and I love it. Do you think I am too old to begin the study of harmony so that I can understand the rules which the great musicians follow when they compose?"

Mr. Van did not laugh. In fact, he was as deeply touched as any man ought to be who is asked by an old man to help him spell out the mystery of things.

"No, indeed," he answered. "Come to me as often as you can, and we will study harmony together. You will learn as much about it as anyone else can."

So the old man in the long cloak mounted his horse again, younger in heart by many years. He bought his books and his music paper, and for a few months was rich and well-known, but in the presence of the music he loved, and of the man who began to teach him, he was as humble as a little child.

He kept at his studies, as Mr. Van declared him to be one of the best students he ever had.

II.

So much for the patent-medicine man.

The great musician, Alexander Prout, began to study Russian when he was over sixty. I met him later in his life, and he had a fine grasp of it.

It is certainly curious when people of middle age, and later, get the idea that they are too old to accomplish things. They are never too old to begin anything UNLESS THEY ARE COMFORTABLY FIXED IN INDOLENT HABITS. Every man over fifty ought to say this to himself every morning; say it aloud so that he can hear it, and then say it to himself, silently, so that he can trust himself and believe it.

Benjamin Franklin kept on applying himself to new studies as long as he lived. The famous schoolmaster, Dr. Arnold, when in middle life, determined to learn German so that he could read the great authors of that language in the original.

Samuel Smiles tells us that James Watt, the inventor, was over fifty when he began to study French, German and Italian.

I once met a colored man of thirty, or so, who was depressed because he had exhausted all the French courses given in a university. He had mastered them in his spare time. After another Winter at his business, he went to Paris and spent a Summer to extend his studies. He spoke French like a native.

Evening schools are frequently attended by people well along in life, in whom the spirit of self-development is still alive.

A MAN OR WOMAN IS NOT OLD UNTIL THAT SPARK IS DEAD.

Many men and women whose children have grown up, married and left home, spend the Winter evenings in learning a little of the treasures of books and education by reading. I know a man and his wife who have done this for eight or ten years. Not only have they learned something, but they have found a new taste for companionship.

While this desire to learn is always striking in the old, it is sometimes even more so in younger people. There is a young man—or there was a few days ago—carrying a sandwich sign. Now, a sandwich sign is heavy on a man's back and shoulders, but it should not rest heavy on his mind, so this youth chinks, for as he walks with the announcement of the restaurant above his head, he reads a book, so as to get another kind of announcement INTO HIS HEAD.

III.

If you want to learn, begin. That is rule No. 1.

If you begin to be busy, keep at it. That is rule No. 2.

If you keep at it you will have a good time, and the look in your face will change. That is the result of rules 1 and 2.

We can quite well imagine that an old man in a long coat riding horseback through a city street would make the sight-seers laugh. But I wonder if they would laugh if they knew what was going on in the old man's head? A pure desire to know something about a beautiful art.

The next time you see a curious specimen of mankind going somewhere, wish him success in your heart.

He may be looking for a teacher.

Symptoms of Eczema

The moist form of eczema is most common. The affected parts are swollen and tender, with a reddened, raw appearance, covered with a thin, dark crust, through which a gummy liquid appears. Hoops as Gifts

AMONG the new wedding presents are embroidery hoops, the outer one of silver, the inner one of satin wood. These make unique gifts to the girl who does any kind of embroidery during the leisure Summer hours.

Felt Dreadful

Petey had married a colored woman in Samoa—plain colored, as far as I could gather, for he never beat round the bush, and, of course, didn't know how to soften the blow. It reminded me of the day at home when he told me about his debts and his drinking, and it seemed funny to have saved him for this.

I felt perfectly dreadful. It didn't seem as if it could be real. I decided not to tell my husband, for I didn't know whether he would begin to rave about "the azure islands of the unpeopled sea," which was a line in one of his poems, or whether he would be frantically angry.

At all events, I was ashamed of my brother, and it didn't seem fair for the Governor of a State to be uncle to a dozen child. I never got over it—never! I used to wake up and think. What on earth is the matter with me, anyway Something is wrong.

And then I'd remember that it was Petey's negro wife, and it used to make me sick. I was, anyway, that Fanny would be furious, and that gave me some consolation.

That same year Judge Banfield replaced the incumbent at the court of Greece and became Minister to Athens, and Fanny went over from the Riviera to her new "sphere," as Miss Purchase called it.

Stephen was crazy over the photographs of Fanny's little boys, and he had me send those children everything you could imagine, from silver baptismal cups to little American-made shoes, which he bought himself whenever he saw a pretty baby's shoe in a shop, regardless of size or color. I knew Fanny's children never wore them.

Though the children were both boys, they didn't name either of them for Stephen. One day he asked me at last what news I had from my brother Petey.

"Don't be coming home, Esther! I can find him a berth on land now, if he wants it."

And I told him Petey never mentioned anything about coming home.

"Send him a check, a good one—don't be close with the boy; send it with our regards. Raise Miss Purchase's wages, too."

"Why, she's getting a hundred dollars a month now," I said. "She'll be utterly spoiled." And he looked at me reproachfully.

"You can't ruin some brands, Esther! Be what I say; and buy yourself some jewels. Go down town to-morrow and get a handsome solitaire diamond. Come," he said, laughingly, "be a millionaire for me, and tell me how it feels, my dear girl!"

When we went up stairs together I kept wondering—wondering about the Wildwood mines, and Will, and what had happened to him.

An Old Friend

That winter I felt as if I had succeeded in murdering a helpless child. I thought I had killed Stephen's art. Politics laid hold of him with all their fascination and all their force, and there was plenty of both.

Mr. Collins never gave the Governor any peace—he inspired Stephen. I saw he big political scheme in the minds of Stephen's pushers and backers: Nevada wanted my husband in the Senate.

One bitter cold day Stephen went to a directors' meeting of the Big N. in order to meet Senator Hendricks and Mr. Thompson in regard to the Wildwood mines; they were going to consider purchasing. He was likely to be away several days. There was sleighing, but I hadn't been out.

Warm Weather Diet

RED meats may be omitted for a fortnight if there is a tendency to skin eruptions. Lamb, fish and chicken, raw eggs and buttermilk make a nourishing Summer diet when combined with fresh vegetables, oranges and green fruit and light salads.

Do not overwork physically. Get a change of air even a few days. If not, do not fight hunger to the point of not resting. Lie down in the day and go to bed earlier.

Have plenty of fresh air in your rooms. Drop on iron baking sheets with a teaspoon and bake in a slow oven for fifteen minutes.

The Glorification of Cheese

SALAD without cheese? Don't think of such a thing. Its absence makes the best mayonnaise or French dressing wanting in flavor.

The hostess without imagination accepts the salad and cheese dilemma, but does not glorify it. There are housekeepers who buy cakes of cream cheese—pineapple, Edam, Roquefort, Gorgonzola, Brie, even the common American product—and then serve the choice of the family year in and out.

It is cut in the square clumsy, tasteless on the same plate with the main water thin, butter thin, or salted wafer in dreary monotony.

Variety is the spice of salad as well as of life, and great is the variety in which cheese can masquerade.

The housekeeper who does not believe in monotony does not serve cheese in the same way two days in succession. A little planning will enable her to run through four different kinds of cheese at the same time, keeping them all fresh by putting them in an airtight cool place.

As most cheeses spoil quickly, it is well to buy in smaller portions, especially in warm weather. Some cheeses are so unwholesome that pieces will not handle them in Summer, and they should not be bought unless to be eaten at once.

The same kind of cheese may be served in various forms. Take the popular cream cheese, probably more used than any other one make. If you pass it out in squares, one day, the next mix it in balls sprinkled with parsley; again mix with chopped pimolas; or thin slightly with whipped cream, mix with chopped red peppers, and remold into a flat thin cake, which is passed whole.

Instead of serving bar-le-duc and cream cheese separately, stir together into a mixture about the consistency of creamed butter and sugar.

Fried cheese balls are delicious served with plain lettuce and French dressing. Mix into the cheese chopped parsley, a dash of cayenne, a pinch of salt, and two drops of onion juice. Mold into balls, dip in egg and bread crumbs, and fry in boiling lard before serving.

Another fried cheese with lettuce is made of the English or ordinary American cheese cut in strips like French fried potatoes. Dip these in seasoned egg and bread crumbs and fry in deep fat when ready for use.

An artistic arrangement is made by draining the liquid from Spanish pimolas (sweet red peppers), which are then covered with ice water for five minutes and well dried. Stuff with cream cheese, stand on the ice for an hour, then cut into slices across and serve the rings as the ordinary cheese balls or garnish the dish of salad.

Instead of using crackers and cheese separately they are frequently combined. Some wafers or butter thins are good when evenly spread with butter, then sprinkled with paprika and Parmesan cheese.

Even better are cheese breads. Cut day old bread, slices half-inch thick, with a ring cutter in rounds two inches in diameter, butter on both sides, and cover thickly with small pieces of American cheese sprinkled with a little salt and cayenne. Cook in a quick oven until brown and melted.

Cheese drops are good and unusual. Chop two ounces of butter in the bottom of a porcelain sauce pan and pour over it a pint of boiling water. Have ready a cupful each of grated cheese and flour sea-soned with salt, cayenne and a little mustard. Add slowly to the hot water and butter, stir smooth and boil for five minutes. When nearly cold add four unbeaten eggs, one at a time, and beat slowly for fifteen or twenty minutes. Drop on iron baking sheets with a teaspoon and bake in a slow oven for fifteen minutes.

Gifts for Bridesmaids

THE giving of presents by the bridegroom to the bridesmaids is an interesting link with primeval days. There are authorities who contend that it is a survival of the old marriage by capture, and even now in some countries the bridesmaids, all dressed alike, will not allow the bridegroom to approach the bride until he has bestowed on them a little coldess to commemorate the event. In India the Kurku girls pretend to resist the removal of the bride, pelting the prospective bridegroom with balls of boiled rice. On the threshold of the home they make a final stand and only capitulate after the friends of the bridegroom as well as himself have paid toll in the form of presents.

In the neighborhood of Risengbirge on the evening of the day preceding the one on which the celebration of the nuptials takes place the bridesmaids assemble at the home of the bride to make the wreaths, and during the meal which follows three symbolic dishes are placed before the bride. When the dancing is over two veiled figures are held up to the prospective husband by the files of honour, neither of which is his special property; he then becomes impatient. Finally a third figure is conducted to him, but ere he is permitted to claim her he has to pay a heavy ransom to the girls who surround her.

In these utilitarian days it is permissible for the bridegroom to give something useful as well as ornamental to the bridesmaids; it must, however, be a trifle that can be worn.

Quite a novel idea is the presentation of a set consisting of a wreath, aumoniere and muff, which sometimes includes a little neck or shoulder accessory. Very appropriate for that purpose are those fashioned of ribbon festooned with diminutive flowers, which often represent the bride's favorite or name flower.

For instance, the wreath might be of apple blossom finished with a pale pink bow, the basis of the bag would be ribbons showered with petals of the flower or a trull of the blossoms, and suspended from the shoulders by a heavy gold or silver bullion cord.

As a matter of fact, these bags are clothed in a similar manner to the satchel of the schoolboy; the same idea is repeated in the muff.

HARD LABOR

Hobo—Madam, you master misunderstood me. His here piece o' meat ain't what I said for.

Lady—Didn't you beg for something to eat?

Hobo—Yessum. Not for work.

THREE TESTS

1. Test our tea with your eyes. Pour boiling water on it and watch the perfect leaves unfold.

We use only perfect leaves and keep them perfect by packing through the bottom of the canister to avoid crushing.

2. Let your nose make the second test.

Does n't the crisp fragrance of our tea make you fancy the leaves were picked yesterday? We keep that delicate freshness by expert curing and packing.

3. The third and best test of all is made by your taste.

For you find in the flavor the same delightful freshness which your nose found in its fragrance.

Desperate Desmond

CLAUDE: I LOVE ONLY YOU!
NOW THAT THE VILLAIN DESMOND IS GONE FOREVER WE CAN SEE MARRIED AND BE SO HAPPY ROSAMOND
SWING ME REAL HIGH, MAJOR!
NOW FOR THE DIRTY WORK, HA, HA, HA
CLAUDE: YOU'RE MY HERO!
OUCH! SOMEBODY WILL BE SORRY FOR THIS!
MARTINEZ
THE CUR!
CURSE IT CAN'T STOP THE STAMPEDE OF CANNON BALLS!
COCH! BOOMER
YOU CAN'T ESCAPE ME NOW, DESMOND!
I'LL FOIL YOU YET AND WIN ROSAMOND! YOU SHALL DIE BY MY HAND, DESMOND!
YOU CAN'T ESCAPE THE ELECTRIC CHAIR, DESMOND!
MY HENCHMEN ARE WAITING IN THE WATER BELOW. ONE SWING AND THE LOVERS WILL BE DUMPED INTO THE SEA. (WAIT TO BE IN MY POWER)

"I'm the boy!" exclaims Desperate Desmond, as he climbs stealthily toward the hammock wherefrom Claude and Rosamond are happily gazing out over the moonlit waters. Odd thing about moonlight—it always makes you say things that sound awfully foolish by daylight. O, D. intends to give the hammock a swing and shoot the lovers into the ocean

But pause! Behind the villain, the gallant Major who commands the fort is swinging another hammock containing a fair lady. A hammock without a fair lady is like an apple pie without apples—but to return. Just as Desmond is about to work his wicked will—

Bang! Likewise whang! The Major, in trying to swing too high, has bumped into the pile of cannon balls. He has learned painfully the should never swing TOO high, but at the same time he has helped the lovers. Desmond is right in the path of the rolling balls and is apparently doomed to destruction.

What an interruption for Claude and Rosamond! The scoundrel whom they thought blown to pieces in a balloon explosion suddenly rattles past their hammock on stampeding cannon balls, just as if he were roller coasting. But is Claude Eclaire alarmed? Not as you could can tell. Burnco is where the tough nuts come from.

With the spring of a kitten upon a catnip ball, Claude is out of the hammock and has Desmond in his terrible grip. The cannon balls bounce over the wall and bump upon the heads of the wild men below, low. Whether the heads or the projectiles are broken only time and other pictures can tell. Burnco is where the tough nuts come from.

At last Claude and Rosamond appear to have ended their troubles. The villain is securely strapped to the electric chair and the current is ready. Yet Desperate Desmond does not bellc his name and swears to escape. To-morrow we shall see if he keeps his promise.

"DESPERATE DESMOND" IS NOW A REGULAR FEATURE OF THE SUNDAY AMERICAN DON'T MISS THE THRILLING ADVENTURES OF CLAUDE ECLAIRE AND HIS ROSAMOND IN THE SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Character Selvedge

By ADA PATTERSON

WE have all studied the selvedge of the cloth from which our gowns are made, but who has given any study to character selvedge?

The rough edge that keeps the cloth from fraying, that gives it strength and durability, is the selvedge. Every character is a fabric, sombre or bright in color, in one continuous tone or shot with sunny lights and shades, and each has its rough finished edge, its selvedge.

Yesterday I had glimpse of several character selvedges. I met on a crowded car one the homeward way a successful young business woman. I know that in her small domain she is brilliantly efficient and that moreover all her acts in that little world are tinged with human kindness. But in the jostling mass, and the fetid air of the car, the selvedge of the business woman's character revealed itself.

The end of a hard day long was in the face that had that morning been bright and was tired. She was a bit overcome by the warfare of the day. She was irritated by the wretched accommodations afforded to the long-goers, and she would have liked to chase from this earth the huge man who had walked across her aching feet. The light had all gone out of the face that was that morning bright. The smile with which she usually faced the world and retreated behind a frown. She looked many shades plainer and many years older.

Preoccupied Moods

I saw a meeting between two girl friends, saw the indifferent greeting of one and the sensitive flush and the surprised look in the eyes of Too quiet and I recalled what the late T. DeWitt Talmage told his children, who complained that a friend had scanned less cordial than usual when they met, like on Broadway at noon. "Broadway and noon don't make for cordiality from a hard-worked, hard-pressed business man, my dears." he made gentle answer. "Remember, if your friends seem a shade less friendly some days than others, that we all have our preoccupations." Preoccupied moods are selvedge of the characters of those who lead busy lives.

For a half-hour I listened a little impatiently to the chatter of a middle-aged widow. I knew that this woman had been a staunch and noble wife. Her business partner had driven her husband out of the morass of bankruptcy and placed him upon the heights of affluence. And yet it was all to no purpose to listen to this bygone suppliating the compliments of fortune-hunting suitors, who laughed at her susceptibility and embalmed her fortune behind her back when they were not gilding with simulated sentiment into her eyes. I had to recall the fair, fine fabric of the woman's previous life, the sacrifices she had made, the genuine devotion she had shown, and turn my eyes from her pitiful, contemptible vanities—her character selvedge.

The Rough Edge

I listened to a speech that was the selvedge of a girl's character. I heard a woman who has tasted deep of the sorrows of life, who climbed the heights of its joys, say, "Nothing matters much, except having enough money." And again pondered how to revert to the real fabric of her character, her strong mother love, the breadth and tenderness of her character. Her momentary conclusion was merely the rough edge, the selvedge.

One whom I had known in all gentleness, all levity, told me she was worried in spirit because she had that day "been mad in one of her rages." "I was so angry that I actually ran right into some one and knew on the street, and didn't know me," she said. "It was like an enraged yearling. I saw bump his head and hurt himself horribly against the locked wire fence of the pasture." But the rage had been caused by hearing an ill-natured gossip of one of her friends. I told her that I had known this girl as all loyalty. Her loyalty prompted the blind rage—character selvedge!

When we buy material for a new gown we look long at the beauty of the fabric, only briefly, if at all, at the ugly selvedge. That is what one must do at the character selvedge. When the gown is made the selvedge is covered and forgotten. So with our fault of thought of our friends.

The De Bercy Affair

TO DAY'S INSTALMENT

By GORDON HOLMES

PART TWO

WINTER was far too strong a man to remain long buried in the pit of humiliation into which Furneaux, almost unwittingly by Clarke, had cast him. The sounds of Furneaux's jaunty footsteps had barely died away before he shoved aside the papers on which he had been engaged previously and reclined across the table for a box of cigars.

He took one and shoved the box toward Clarke, whose face was still glistening in evidence of his rush from Marlborough street police station.

"Here, you crack-pate," he said, "smoke. It may clear your silly head."

"But I can't repent too often that Janice has confessed—confessed!" and Clarke's voice rose almost to a squeal on that dear word.

"So has his sister confessed. In an hour or two, when the silence and horror of a cell have done their work, we shall have Osborne confessing, too. Oh, man, can't you see that Furneaux has twisted each of us round his little finger?"

"But—but—"

"Yes, I know," cried Winter, in a flame of wrath and smoke. "Believe those foreign idiots and we shall be hearing of a masked tribunal, glistening with daggers, a brace of revolvers in every belt—a dozen or more infuriated conspirators clustered at the doors, gathered in a West End flat, while a red-headed woman harangues them. Furneaux has fooled us, I tell you—deliberately brought the yard into discredit, made us the laughing stock of the police. Oh, I shall never—"

He paused himself up, for Clarke was listening with the ears of a rabbit. Luckily, the detective's ideas were too self-concentrated to extract much food for thought from these disjointed outpourings.

"I don't wish to seem wanting in respect, sir," he said doggedly, "but have you forgotten the diary? Why, those de Bercy letters that she would be killed either by C. E. F. or Janice. Now——"

"Did she mention Janice?" interrupted Winter abruptly. "In that message? I certainly have forgotten that."

Clarke, stubborn as a mule, stuck to his point, though he felt that he had committed himself.

"Perhaps I did wrong," he growled savagely, "but I couldn't help myself. You were against me all along, sir—now, weren't you?"

No answer. Winter waited and did not even look at him.

The Daggers

"What was I to do?" he went on in desperation. "You took me off the job just as I was getting keen in it. Then I happened upon Janice, and found his sister, and when I came across that blacked-out name in the diary I scraped it and snooped it until I could read what was written beneath. The name was Janice!"

"Was it?" said Winter, gazing at him at last with a species of contempt. "And to throw dust in my eyes—in the eyes of your superior officer—you inked it out again?"

"You wouldn't believe," muttered Clarke. "Why, you don't know half this story. I haven't told you yet how I found the daggers."

"You don't say.," mocked Winter.

"But I do, I did," cried Clarke, beside himself with excitement. "I took them out of Janice's lodgings, and put them in my club. I would have them in my hands this minute if some d—d thing hadn't occurred, some trick of fate—"

Winter stopped and unlocked a drawer in his writing desk.

"Are those your daggers?" he demanded, though Clarke was shrewd enough, if in possession of his usual senses, to have caught the note of suppressed astonishment in the Chief Inspector's voice, since this was the first he had heard of Furneaux's deliberate pilfering of the weapons from his colleague.

But something was singing in Clarke's ears, and his eyes were glued on the blades resting there in the drawer. Denial was impossible. He recognized them instantly, and all his assurance fled from that moment.

"Well, there!" he murmured, in a curiously broken voice. "I give in! I'm done! I'm a baby at this game. Next thing, I suppose, I'll be asked to resign—me, who found 'em, and the diary, and the letter telling Janice not to kill her—yet."

He was looking so fixedly at the two daggers that he failed to see the smile of relief that flitted over Winter's face. Now, more than ever, the Chief Inspector realized that he was dealing with one of the most complex and subtle crimes which had come within his twenty years of experience.

He was well versed in Furneaux's sardonic humor, and the close friendship that had existed between them ever since the latter had been joined the Criminal Investigation Department had alone stopped him from resenting it.

Planned Discoveries

It was clear now to his quick intelligence that Furneaux had actually planned nearly every discovery which either he himself or Clarke had made. Why? He could not answer. He was moving through a fog, blind-folded, with hands tied behind his back.

Search where he would, he could not find a motive, unless, indeed, Furneaux was actuated by the simplest of all motives, the desire to convict himself. At any rate, he did not want Clarke to tread on the delicate ground that must now be covered before a fresh start was attempted, and the happy accident which had unlocked Clarke's tongue with regard to the diary would serve admirably to keep him well under control.

"Now, look here, Inspector Clarke," said Winter severely, after a pause that left the other in a state of nervous suspense, "you have erred badly in this matter. For once I am willing to overlook it—because—because you fancied you had a grievance.

"But, remember this—never again! Lack of candor is fatal to the best interests of the service. It is for me to decide which cases you shall take up and which you shall leave alone. You know perfectly well that if, by chance, information reaches you with regard to any inquiry which may prove useful to me in charge of it, it is your duty to tell him everything. I say no more now.

To Be Continued Monday.

The Headache a Warning

OFTEN enough we hear, "Oh, I'm all right. It's only one of my bad headaches." This attitude of complacence is more agreeable than grumbling, but it is decidedly foolish for the victim.

A headache should not be taken too lightly. It is always a sign of something wrong. Instead of being acquiescent, search for the cause.

The headache habit is not to be encouraged; neglected, it saps the joy of life. The recurrent pain may not be torturing, but even a dull pain gets on one's nerves and a worse day is approaching.

The girl who gets headaches and pays no attention to them is the wife and mother who may become a whining invalid.

If only in the interest of pleasure, a girl should stop headaches. She cannot control the hour of their coming, and many a joyful engagement is missed thereby, or if kept is not half enjoyed.

And there is the danger of the headache powder habit. Half the drugging of which the American women are accused is due to pains in the head. There are cures which are effective, and so are taken not only when necessary, but at the first symptom. And also tenths of those cures depress the heart, and the other tenth bears watching.

No pain is negligible when it can make us restless." This attitude of complacence or may one's business, ruin one's disposition, and spoil work and play.

The girl who gets headaches, even slight ones, should ask herself "Why is it?" Perhaps it is indigestion. She may be a candy eater or she may eat too heavily or too rich food at her meals; possibly she may not eat enough; malnutrition is one of the chief causes of headache.

Perhaps her glasses are, too light. Stopped circulation is sure to result on the blood vessels of the head. Modern styles make light lacing unfashionable, but there are still silly girls who pull in their stays. And, do you know, tight shoes can give you a headache as well as make you habitually cross?

Perhaps you are not getting enough fresh air. There is nothing like open windows day and night, and all the out-door life and moderate exercise to stop the headache habit.

Worry weighs on the nerves and they take it out in blinding pains in the head.

Perhaps—and this is the big perhaps—it is the eyes. There is no swifter way to get headaches than to strain your eyes or to have defective vision.

Glasses are a nuisance and are unbecoming to most of us, but then caring for the eyes does not always mean glasses, and if it does better be not so lovely than peevish or moody.

Ways of Reducing Weight

CUT out the food!

This is the real secret of flesh reducing. If the body is not overfed it is bound to be thin, because dieting is distasteful to most of us when we try every other cure first.

One reason for this distaste of food cutting is that it has been overdone. It is less necessary to go on a right diet or to starve for days, as is often advised, than to reduce greatly the daily amount of food.

If you want to get thin cut out the decidedly starchy, flesh-making foods, such as potatoes, rice, and beets, and go in for acid fruits and hot water; but do not make your own life and that of your hostess miserable by being a diet fadist.

Instead eat sparingly. Reduce the quantity of food at each meal rather than the kinds of food you eat. Make a rule do not let yourself get a stuffed feeling and to avoid eating between meals.

Try for a month to get up from the table hungry. You should lose pounds. If you can cut out one meal entirely without feeling discomfort, do so.

No fixed rule can be made for dieting, and it is never safe to starve one's self or to become a nuisance about what you eat. Chronic dyspepsia and a shriveled skin will be the penalty of lack of nutrition. Far better be fat!

HARDLY

Professor: It's one of the frailties of human nature that no matter how much a man gets he wants more.

Friend (thoughtfully): Oh, I don't know about that—not in a police court he is not.

Anty Drudge to the Rescue of Daughter's Pale Blue Gingham.

Mrs. Careful—"I have made my daughter such a pretty pale blue gingham dress, and now I am worried for fear it will fade in the wash."

Anty Drudge—"It won't fade if you don't rub it hard, nor put it in boiling water. Just wash it carefully in Fels-Naptha suds, made in cool or luke-warm water, and it will come out as bright as new. But be sure not to use hot water with Fels-Naptha!"

The Fels-Naptha way of washing gives the clothes a fair chance.

The old-fashioned way is destructive because it first softens the fibre by boiling, and then subjects it to the telling rub of the washboard.

With Fels-Naptha soap there is no boiling nor is there the hard back-breaking drudgery of the washboard.

Just rub Fels-Naptha soap on the clothes, roll and place them in cool or lukewarm water. Half an hour will be long enough for the soap to do its work. Then a light rub, thorough rinse, blued and the clothes are white, pure, and ready to hang out. And you'll find Fels-Naptha just as good for every other kind of household cleaning. Follow closely the easy directions on the red and green wrapper.

STAR AUTOISTS AT FALL RIVER

By J. C. KERRISON.

The position taken by the Bay State Automobile Association in regard to Chairman Parker of the Massachusetts Highway Commission is one that has the approbation and support of all fair minded citizens who believe that everything should be done right and proper course on all occasions.

Now, Whalen, who is to be one of the star performers in the Fall River meet this afternoon, has proved and won a good many times over, and although the many other good drivers who have never had the fortune to display their wares on sensational flat track, are entitled to win a big cheque during their no way eleven mile thrilling, it must be said that his most brilliant driver was in the Brighton Beach twenty-four-hour race last August, when he scored second, rolling up 1,174 miles, after leading toward a half hours with a broken wheel.

This afternoon, Whalen will drive a Palmer-Singer, and will find plenty of competitors on less an individual than Harry Cose, with the same identical Jackson six in which he ran second to Ralph DePalma in the Indianapolis event. Ray Gilhooly with the Peerless will be another one of the contenders, while Morton if Knox will endeavor to wipe off the unlimited hill-climbing records at Portland a week ago.

The track at Fall River is in fine shape, the list of entries is a good one, and it has been so arranged that all events will be finished in ample season to permit the spectators to witness the flight of the Curtis biplane scheduled as one of the closing events of the Fall River carnival.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCKS UP IN STRONG MARKET

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

STATE STREET, June 24.—Closing.—Though the stress of the Harriman merger decision came as a surprise to the Street the market gave immediate response and after a most active day's trading closed with an average advance of one point, with good buying throughout the whole roster. Railroads, industrials and copper all sharing equal favor.

Reports of rain in the grain and cotton sections were factors which also helped, as did reports from tar-heel mills that they were working on longer time than last month.

Southern Pacific and Union Pacific advanced 1 point; Reading 1¼; Steel and Steel preferred 1 point; Smelters ¾ and Amalgamated ½. Underwood Typewriter went to 105½, a six-point advance from yesterday's close, when it showed a free-wheel gain.

After the first upward movement had subsided and shorts nearly all covered some profit-taking occurred, but the supply was easily absorbed.

One of the features which showed the inherent strength of the market was the partial profiting of the hard coal roads, in spite of good buying was noted, with Reading and Lehigh in the lead.

On the local board orders were well distributed and the tone was strong.

There have been about 75,000 shares of Atlantic Refining Company stock deposited with American Trust Company for exchange into Copper Range Consolidated shares on basis of 10 for 7. The offer of deposit expires July 1.

Sales of coppers in the Copper Range group in the past week are the largest for any week for several months. Many of these have practically no coupon on hand at the present time.

It is good banking that the usual United Fruit "bonus" will not be paid.

There have been liberal rains in the dry part of the cotton belt, and showers are reported in the Spring wheat belt. Besides the market is oversold there is likely to be a scramble to get back stocks sold.

Bankers considered it significant that the selling movement of the few previous days has not frightened real shareholders, the selling being almost entirely professional. Even with considerable crop damages, the country certain of producing a greater tonnage of cross than last year, although the acreage may be somewhat less. The cotton crop, which was in jeopardy for more than a week, is now said to be in splendid condition and experts are figuring on a yield of about 12,000,000 bales.

$ $ $

The market depends almost entirely on the crops for the next few weeks, but in the highest banking circles the advice is given freely that stocks should be purchased between now and July 10 on every show of weakness, for that date the government's report on corn and Spring wheat will be issued, and by that time Congress will have decided on the tariff, the Steel Trust will have acted in respect of dividends, and the Copper Producers' Association will have declared a dividend, and by that time the government's report on cotton will be public.

$ $ $

Although official denial is made by Canadian Pacific officials, the rumor that Eric is being purchased for that system, Eric stocks are strong on the theory that there is to be absorption. The preferred stocks are getting almost within sight of dividends, and the fact that Eric and Canadian Pacific are both being manipulated by the same people should be encouraging to investors. In view of the collapse in Erie shares when

New Haven Railroad Monopoly a Menace to the Prosperity of New England

The stern and rock-bound coast of New England for years has attracted the Summer visitor. In Maine and New Hampshire and Vermont, in some sections of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, a great source of profit flows from the expenditure of strangers, who make their Summer home at our New England seaside.

The Grand Trunk Railroad has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars advertising the attractiveness of our resorts. This railroad has spent its own money bringing business to New England. It has helped to fill our hotels and our farmhouses and our cottages with the well-to-do visitors. Many a New England boy has paid his way through college from the tips of these free-handed strangers.

Many a New England mother has given her daughter an artistic education from the board and lodging of the Canadian visitor attracted there by the Grand Trunk's advertisement and carried there by a Grand Trunk car. Many a New England family relies upon its Summer boarders to pay the mortgage on the home.

The old management of the Boston & Maine, controlled by genuine New England citizens and managed principally to render transportation service in New England, co-operated with the Grand Trunk in facilitating the travel of the Canadians in search of our New England resorts.

But the old New England management is lost to the Boston & Maine. The career of Lucius Tuttle as president of the Boston & Maine was terminated in an eclipse.

His management of the Boston & Maine was unjustly flouted and contemned. A strange numbness of pride in Mr. Tuttle has permitted him to submit without resistance to criticism which he knew was not deserved and from men who did not intend to do better.

For several years after the New Haven interests succeeded to the control of his railroad, Mr. Tuttle remained its figurehead and then he passed out meekly and mutely, without a word in answer to his contemnors.

Now the Boston & Maine is managed by the New York, New Haven & Hartford and interests which control it by New York methods.

Gradually service is being reduced on the Boston & Maine, and now the New Haven management is seeking to embarrass the Grand Trunk's important service to New England by an unworthy trick, through a subsidiary station company in Portland.

The indefensible character of this petty annoyance is plain enough from the New Haven Railroad's attempts to hide behind a little company organized to manage ONE OF ITS OWN STATIONS, or rather, one of the stations of its controlled company, the Boston & Maine.

However, all these great and small follies of the New Haven management are not unmixed with evils. If there remains the slightest doubt that the continuance of the New Haven monopoly in this community is a continuing menace to our prosperity, these foolish performances will soon remove that lingering doubt.

And the old adage is still true that whom the gods would destroy they first make unwise.

If No Whiskers Are Allowed in the Dairy, Then Why Whiskers in the Sickroom?

J. B. Haggin Makes His Milkers Shave. Common Sense Ought to Make the Doctors Shave

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal Examiner.

J. B. Haggin, a very wise old man, raises cows, produces milk for the market and aims to have it pure.

The way to have pure milk is to milk the cows in clean stables, have the milking done by men dressed in clean, fresh linen suits, with their hands properly washed, and all the utensils thoroughly sterilized.

J. B. Haggin, who has done things thoroughly all his life, and doesn't appear to have lost the art now that he is past eighty, has notified the men that milk his cows that they must shave at least every other day. Their faces must be smooth; they must not sit down beside the cow and hold over the milk pail that microbe-breeding, germ-preserving nest, called a "human beard."

An excellent idea. No man with whiskers ought to milk a cow unless he is willing to have the whiskers washed with carbolic acid each day—which would be painful.

We indorse Mr. Haggin's idea concerning the milkers of his cows, principally to call attention once more to what we have already said about the folly of doctors with whiskers.

There was a day when it was thought necessary for a doctor to have whiskers. If he didn't have long side whiskers which he could pull wisely, nobody thought he knew anything about medicine. And he had also to be old enough to develop a large stomach and have a large gold chain stretched across it, otherwise mothers and fathers thought that he wasn't wise enough to take care of their children.

Now we know better about the fat stomach, and the long side-whiskers, and the long watch chain.

Why any whiskers at all on a doctor? Why should a doctor go to a child with scarlet fever, collect the germs of scarlet fever in his whiskers, and carry those germs into the next house? Who knows how many cases of disease have been spread by doctors?

Cats are an abomination, because they carry disease in their fur from one house to another. But a doctor who carries disease germs in his whiskers is not so very much better.

We beg the doctors to follow the example of Mr. Haggin and decide that, as we wipe out the pools that breed mosquitoes and eliminate the cesspools that make flies so dangerous, so we ought also to do away with whiskers—at least among doctors—the home and the haven and the distributing centres of germs of all kinds.

Gov. Pothier, Meet Mike Slattery

Mike Tells in To-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN About His Gambling Place in North Providence and About a Lot of Other Places Where Gambling Flourishes in Your State. And Mike Slattery Knows, Governor!

If Aram J. Pothier, Governor of Rhode Island, were asked who knows more about gambling in that little State than any other man he would without hesitation respond: "Mike Slattery."

And Governor Pothier knows. Slattery is on the inside on gambling in Rhode Island, and for that very reason Slattery's revelations about gambling in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN should be of the GREATEST VALUE to Governor Pothier.

It is illegal to run a gambling place in Rhode Island. The Governor of the State, when he took his oath of office, swore to uphold the laws of the State. He is naturally interested in getting INSIDE INFORMATION about law-breaking in his domain.

Mike Slattery is delightfully frank in his exposition of Rhode Island gambling. He admits that he's a gambler and that he is interested in the place at North Providence. That makes that part of it easy. It does not require detectives and a lot of sleuthing to find out that THERE IS GAMBLING in Rhode Island. Slattery says there is, and Slattery knows.

But the genial Mr. Slattery goes further than this. He says there are other gambling places, where one may be accommodated at faro and roulette, besides his.

And Slattery GIVES THE NAMES OF THE GAMBLERS and the LOCATIONS of their places. That also makes it easy for the Governor. It is one of those games where you set a gambler to catch a gambler. All the Governor will have to do to-morrow morning is to get the Sunday AMERICAN and read what Slattery says. (Straight tip—Better order your Sunday AMERICAN to-day, as it will be a mighty hard thing to buy a Sunday AMERICAN in Rhode Island to-morrow.)

Governor Pothier will find the situation, as portrayed at Narragansett Pier, very interesting. A remarkable election has just been held there. It was not an election between wet and dry, or reform and anti-reform contingents. It was a battle of DOLLARS between two GAMBLING CLIQUES.

Now they have a constable at this lively Summer resort to look after the unruly WHO IS SEVENTY YEARS OLD. And Jack Joyce's Elm Cottage and Mike Slattery's White House are getting ready for the hottest gambling fight that New England ever saw!

Mike Slattery's own story of Rhode Island gambling in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN is one of the most unique features ever published in a newspaper.

The Story of the Two Foolish Young Things Who Wish to Wed

A Youth of 21, with No Future, Who Earns $12 a Week, and a Girl of 19, Who Is Breaking the Hearts of Parents Who Plead With Her to Remain with Them Just a Year Longer

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

THIS is one side of a story: A youth of twenty-one falls in love with a girl of nineteen after an acquaintance of three months and wishes her to marry him. He has no money, and no more future than a rabbit in snowtime, but he says he loves her and insists that there be no delay to their marriage because of the trifling obstacle of poverty.

He gets possibly twelve dollars a week, and his work is such that he is not a necessity to the house that employs him. It could get along nicely without him. She works for the same firm and gets about ten a week, and it is not probable that she will ever command more.

She can continue in her position for a year, he plans, and then "if things don't turn out right for them" his father and mother can take care of them.

The girl says she loves him, and, being only nineteen and foolish, is willing to marry on these terms.

Romance but a Flame That Traps Foolish Young Moths

This side of the story is commonly called Romance, and appears in all the popular magazines served up with a garnishment of moonlight, longings, heart throbs, poetry and pink clouds, and Young Things delight in it.

This is the other side of the story: The mother of the girl is heart-broken and begs the girl to wait only one short year. The mother believes that in that time the girl will discover the man's love is only a temporary infatuation.

"He is thinking only of Self," the mother tells her daughter. "If he loved you more than he loves himself he wouldn't ask you to marry till he is able to support you."

This side of the story deals with unadorned facts, and isn't attractive to the eye or ear. There is nothing soothing or beguiling in warnings of rents, fuel, the high prices of meat and groceries; there is nothing of enthralling interest in hints of bills and babies, and this side of the story seldom interests the Young Things to whom it is told.

The girl has been brought up in the popular American fashion. She can't sew or cook, and is as ignorant of housework as though her father were a duke instead of a workingman; and her mother has always waited on her as if she believed it her heaven-ordained mission to become a slave to the princess who honored them by taking up her abode in their house.

The Tragedy of the Spoiled Child in the Family

When a child she got everything she cried for, and the only reason this tragedy didn't threaten sooner is that never before did she cry for anything more unfit for her than a doll costing half her father's salary.

The Babes in the Woods were never more helpless than these two children will be if permitted to marry, but popular sentiment, under the guise of Romance, has done so much to encourage such inclinations that the parents of both the young man and the girl are powerless to prevent.

It is useless to appeal to the man. He is thinking only of Self, and no plea that can be made will be large enough to hide Self from his vision.

As for the girl, she is nineteen. For nineteen years her mother and father have given their lives to her. All they ask is that she give one short year to them. One year in return for nineteen. One year of delay in a marriage that will mean a total wreck of her life.

It is not asking much. They agree to let her see her sweetheart as often as she wishes, and will put no restraint on her coming or going. All they ask is that she wait one year.

She Has a Chance to Pay the Greatest Debt in Life

She has a splendid chance to pay the greatest debt she will ever owe. She has an opportunity to make some return for the many sacrifices made for her and save herself in making it.

And, greatest of all, she would set an example that other foolish Young Things steeped in pink clouds, moonlight, longings, heart throbs and selfishness badly need.

Will she do it? You who know the heart of a maid answer.

Can you believe that a man paid back $2,153 on an original loan of $15, or that another person has paid $4,000 on an original loan of $400 and still owes $850? Well, both instances are facts. In to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN an expose of the loan shark business will be printed that will shock all New England.
